Europeans Now Willing To Include Italy in Pact

Acheson Assures 5 Envoys Senate Leaders Approve Of Treaty Draft

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

At least two uncertainties were removed from the Atlantic defense treaty's prospects yesterday when Secretary Dean Acheson met with the envoys of Canada and the five Western Union countries of Europe.

The Europeans were able to assure Acheson of their willingness, for the first time, to see Italy become a signer of the treaty. The State Department here has wanted for months to include Italy, but British and other objections have stood in the way.

The agreement to invite Italy was reached at last week's meeting in London of the foreign ministers of the five Western Union countries: Great Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. There is no question that Italy will accept; the De Gasperi government has been tumbing over itself with eagerness to join the select North Atlantic circle, in spite of dire threats and warnings from its Communist enemies.

Senators in Accord

On the American side, Acheson was able to tell the Europeans that Senate leaders were substantially satisfied with the treaty draft. He had already shown the draft to Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and to Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), author of last summer's Senate resolution which authorized American "association" with other countries for mutual defense.

Except for a few words the Senators wanted changed here and there, they approved the treaty draft as being within the terms of the Senate's resolution. Connally exacted a promise, however, that his committee would have a chance to examine the draft, and to question Acheson on it, before the treaty is signed.

Knotty Problems Remain

Yesterday's meeting was Acheson's first as Secretary with the group of Ambassadors which has been discussing the treaty since last summer. Whereas his predecessor, Secretary Marshall, left the negotiations in the hands of Undersecretary Robert A. Lovett, Acheson apparently intends to take charge of the treaty talks himself.

Some knotty problems still remain, and the date when the treaty can be signed is still uncertain.

Among the difficulties is the set

She walked about 75 feet to the south end of the tunnel and obtained aid. She was admitted to Providence Hospital for observation and treated for possible fractures of the ribs and right knee and cuts and bruises.

Chief of New York Consulate Tops List Of 9 Making Protest

New York, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Nine Hungarian diplomatic officials in the United States, including the acting consul general here, resigned today in protest against the conviction of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty in Budapest.

Bela Balassa, head of the Hungarian Consulate in New York, was the top diplomat resigning. Four other members of the New York staff, two of the Cleveland consulate and two members of the Hungarian Legation in Washington also quit.

The mass resignations came as hundreds of persons, mostly Catholics, held a protest demonstration on the steps of City Hall, waving placards that read: "Soviet Hungary is the Tool of Stalin," "We

Minister Also Charges Spellman Played Role In Cardinal's 'Treason'

By Edward M. Korry

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 8 (U.P.). The Hungarian government today denounced Selden Chapin, United States Minister to Hungary, and Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York for their alleged roles in the "treason" of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, 56, who was sentenced by a people's court to life imprisonment.

Undersecretary of State for Foreign Affairs Ivan Boldiszar accused Chapin of leading Mindszenty to believe a third world war was imminent, in which the United States would intervene in Hungary.

Boldiszar said Cardinal Spellman's sermon in New York Sunday was not worthy of an official answer because he was not "an objective observer" and was "implicated" in the Mindszenty case.

Found guilty after a three-day trial, Mindszenty was sentenced to life in a convicts' prison, the hardest of Hungary's three grades of prisons. He appealed the sentence to the Supreme Peoples Tribunal, which has authority either to reduce it or to increase it to death by hanging.

The cardinal's trial court told him his "crimes" were punishable by death, but that it had exercised its power to reduce his sentence by one degree. The prosecution

6-Jet Bomber Crosses U. S. in 3 Hrs., 46 Min.

607.8 MPH Average Cuts Speed Marks for All Type Aircraft

A new unofficial transcontinental speed record of 3 hours 46 minutes was established yesterday by a 60-ton Boeing XB-47 Stratojet bomber.

The swept-wing, six-jet airplane sped 2289 miles from Moses Lake Air Force base in central Washington State to Andrews Field Air Force base, Maryland, nonstop at an average speed of 607.8 miles an hour.

Air Force Majs. R. E. Schleeh and Joseph W. Howell were at the controls.

Cuts All-Type Mark

Described officially as a "routine mission," the flight cut 27 minutes and 23 seconds from the all-type West-East speed record of 4 hours and 13 minutes and 23 seconds established January 26, 1946, by Col. W. H. Councill in an Air Force F-80 jet fighter, flying from Long Beach, Calif. to LaGuardia Field, N. Y. The F-80's average speed was 584.82 miles per hour for the 2470-mile flight.

Likewise, the XB-47 set a new record for bombers, the fastest previous flight of this type having been Col. Clarence (Bill) S. Irvine's West-East dash of 5 hours, 27 minutes on December 12, 1945, in an Air Force Boeing B-29 Superfortress. Colonel Irvine's flight was from Burbank, Calif., to Floyd Bennett Field, N. Y., a distance of 2466 miles. His average speed was 450 mile per hour.

At Up to 40,000 Feet

Major Schleeh, who left Moses Lake at 7:22 PST (10:22 EST) and passed over the Andrews Control at 2:08 p. m. EST, said the flight was made at altitudes up to 40,000 feet to take advantage of most favorable winds.

Just before the ship's wheels touched the runaway at Andrews, Schleeh released a huge ribbon-type parachute from the tail of the big plane to help cut its speed.

The new jets are so fast that the Air Force is experimenting with ways to slow them down upon landing so they won't burn up their brakes. It also has been experimenting with reversible pitch propellers.

GOP Is Split 'Wide Open', Dewey Says

Governor Asks Party To Tell People Where It Stands and Why

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York stated bluntly here last night that the Republican Party is "split wide open." He called on the GOP to face up to this fact instead of trying to conceal it, to stop "bellyaching" about the past, and to start making it clear to the country where it stands and why. For his own part, he thought it had no choice but to be "a progressive, forward-looking party," shunning the extremes represented by New Dealers and Republican reactionaries.

In effect, Gov. Dewey told those Republican officeseekers who oppose the liberal principles of the party platform to take a walk. They ought not, he said, to oppose them as Republicans.

Mum on Nomination

The Republican presidential nominee of 1944 and 1948, who was accused of indulging in lofty platitudes with his "unity" talk last autumn, spoke at a Lincoln Day banquet in the Mayflower, sponsored by the Republicans of Congress and the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia.

He did not repeat his statement of November 3 that he would never again seek the Presidency. In noting, however, that he had been elected for a second term to that "somewhat mythical office known as titular head of the Republican Party," the 46-year-old New Yorker quipped:

"I have been graduated at a comparatively early age to the role of elder statesman, which someone has aptly defined as a politician who is no longer a candidate for any office."

Reviews Record

Then, with a bluntness which he said his role permitted, Governor Dewey reviewed the "dismal record" of the GOP in the last five presidential elections, and plunged into his theme.

"Without seeking to find scapegoats or to make excuses," he said, "I would like to bring out into the open one basic problem.

"The Republican Party is split wide open. It has been split wide

Forrestal Asks Vast Reform In Military Justice System

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Defense Secretary James Forrestal yesterday asked Congress to adopt a new code of American military justice, introducing sweeping reforms and creating a uniform system of courts and laws for all the armed forces.

He submitted a 91-page proposed bill designed, he said, to better protect the rights of accused servicemen and "increase public confidence in military justice without impairing performance of military functions."

Most of the objections to the armed forces' courts martial system—voiced during and after the war—would be corrected by the proposed code. It would go farther in this respect than the judicial reforms voted for the Army and Air Force alone by Congress last year.

By replacing the old articles of war, articles for government of the Navy and Coast Guard disciplinary laws by a uniform code, the armed forces will be further unified, officials said. One innovation would permit an Army court martial to try a Navy man, and vice versa.

Another would create a "supreme court" for all the services. It would consist of three or more civilian jurists, who would have the pay—$17,500 a year—and status of justices of the Federal Courts of Appeal.

Several new crimes would be established by the code. They are aimed at imposing proper punish-

Marshall Plan Succeeding, Acheson Says

Secretary, Hoffman Ask Congress for $5,580,000,000 To Continue Policy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Dean Acheson and top ECA officials yesterday told Congress the Marshall Plan is succeeding and this is the year to "hit hard" for recovery in Europe.

Acheson described Communist elements within the 16 cooperating countries as "checked and forced to retreat."

ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman, appearing with Acheson before a joint meeting of the House and Senate Foreign Committees, asked Congress to authorize $5,580,000,000 to finance the program another 15 months.

W. A. Harriman, ECA's roving ambassador, backed up Hoffman at an afternoon hearing of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Said Harriman:

"We are winning this struggle for freedom and peace . . . The pressures in Europe are beginning to reverse . . . beginning to move from west to east . . . What is needed above all else is continuity of policy of a resolute, steadfast and confident America."

Europe Through "First Phase"

Hoffman told the two committees Europe is through the "first phase" of its economic recovery and this year must take "the drastic and sometimes painful steps necessary for real recovery." He asked Congress to back Europe's effort "to the full."

Hoffman and Acheson were allowed to complete their statements without interruption. The Senate committee invited Hoffman to return this morning for cross-examination and will question Acheson Friday. Harriman, testifying separately, made his statement to the House group and was immediately cross-examined.

Hoffman strongly hinted that the $5,580,000,000 total asked for the next 15 months of ECA may not be enough, in which case he may have to come back for more funds.

He described the screening process whereby the amount was scaled down, first by the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, then by ECA and the Budget Bureau, to become "a sum of minimums."

May Have Been "Too Harsh"

It may well be that we have been "too harsh" in our cuts and underestimated the minimum needs of Europe, Hoffman said. In that case he said he may come back to Congress for more.

But if "miracles should happen" and the job can be done with less, he promised any excess would be returned to the Treasury.

Hoffman asked $1,150,000,000 to carry the program through the April-May-June quarter. He urged 750 million dollars of this be advanced by the RFC because "any stoppage in the pipeline to Europe could easily undo the good work that has been done."

For the 1950 fiscal year he requested $4,280,000,000, plus another 150 million dollar authorization for contracts to be made in the next fiscal year but not paid until later.

"If that program brings us peace and stability—and I fervently believe it can—it will turn out to be the greatest bargain that the American people ever had," said Hoffman.

Noting "an upsurge of hope and determination in western Europe,"

Communists Would Be Encouraged by Dropping Provision, Denham Declares

By The Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board's general counsel said last night dropping of the Taft-Hartley Act's non-Communist affidavit provision would encourage Communists trying to dominate labor unions.

Robert N. Denham, the counsel, told the Senate Labor Committee the proposed step would be "a terrific discouragement" for "the labor statesmen" who are attempting to rout Communists from their unions.

The Taft-Hartley Act requires that top officials of unions must sign non-Communist affidavits before the unions are permitted to use the services of the Labor Board.

Denham was giving the committee his views on the Administration's labor bill. In repealing the Taft-Hartley law, that bill would knock out the non-Communist affidavit requirement.

Modified Wagner Act

The Administration measure would substitute a modified Wagner Act for Taft-Hartley law.

Earlier, Denham had told the committee that unions have "grown up" and "don't need to be babied or petted any more." Because of that, Denham said, there is no reason why they should be exempted from Taft-Hartley provision permitting filing of "unfair labor practice" charges against unions.

The committee lagged far behind schedule as it sought to meet a Thursday night deadline for winding up the hearings.

Democratic members met for 90 minutes behind closed doors late today to discuss ways of quickening up the pace. But Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) told reporters no decision was reached.

Thomas said the matter was left to a subcommittee made up of Senators Murray (D., Mont.), Morse (R., Ore.) and Pepper (D., Fla.).

Senator Morse (R., Oreg.) indicated that the Republican members, solidly opposed to the Thursday deadline, would fight any move to curtail testimony further.

Denham first appeared before the committee Monday when he called the Taft-Hartley law "basically sound." He was back yesterday for cross examination.

At one point, Denham objected to a provision of the law which makes it mandatory for the NLRB to seek a court injunction against unions to block secondary boycotts, before the board has ruled on a complaint.

(In a secondary boycott, a union having a dispute with one company tries to stop other firms from doing business with that company.)

Taft Agrees on Point

Urging that the general counsel be given discretion instead of being compelled to seek an injunction, Denham called the power "of tremendous value," but "at times embarrassing." He added:

"It is sometimes like hunting a field mouse with a 16-inch gun."

Senator Taft (R., Ohio), leader of the antirepeal forces, said he was "inclined to agree" with Denham in his objection to the mandatory aspect of the injunction provision.

"It leaves the law open to the charge of being one-sided, that it favors the employer over the employe," Taft commented.

On another point, Taft agreed with Denham that the scope of the

New Food Price Plunges Send Many Below Support Levels

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Prices of America's important farm products plunged downward again yesterday, many of them going far below price support levels.

Wheat, corn and oats were all off the full amounts permitted in one day of trading—10 cents for wheat, 8 cents for corn and 6 cents for oats. Soybeans dropped 10 cents—also the permissible limit.

Live hogs dropped to their lowest level in Chicago since price controls were in effect in October 1946. Yesterday's top prices were $20.50; in OPA days the ceiling was $16.25. But $20.50 is almost 40 per cent below the prices that prevailed just a few months ago. In September, prices ranged around $31.50 a hundred pounds.

Top cattle prices yesterday were $24.50—a far cry from $42.25 a 100 pounds that prevailed last October 16—only four months ago.

Professional traders called the break in grain "liquidation." Selling began early and didn't stop until prices had dropped as far as they could.

The Government supports the price of wheat at $2 to $2.02 a bushel on the Nation's farms. Price support levels at the two biggest wheat terminals are $2.23 a bushel at Kansas City and $2.26 at Minneapolis.

Yet yesterday, May wheat closed at $1.93⅞ a bushel at Kansas City; July wheat at $1.78; September at $1.79½ and December at $1.80¾.

The Midwest corn farmers can borrow $1.44 a bushel on corn properly stored—or can get a Government agreement to buy corn next spring at that figure.

Yet corn futures sold yesterday for May delivery at $1.11¾ a bushel.

Cotton futures in both New York and New Orleans experienced the sharpest break in months. A late rally lifted prices at the day's close. Uncertainty over exports and prospects of large plantings this year precipitated the selling. Losses extended to $4.75 a bale (500 pounds). The day's low was

D. C. Asks Congress For 4-Million Increase In U. S. Help for Year

Plea Is Key Point In Revenue Plan Providing Sales Tax, Liquor Levy Hike

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Top city officials called upon Congress yesterday to make a four-million-dollar increase in the present 12-million-dollar Federal payment to the District.

More Federal help, at least for a year, was a key point in an 18-million-dollar program of new city revenue mapped by the Commissioners to finance next year's 103-million-dollar budget, and pay for the $330 retroactive salary increase they expect Congress to enact for city employes.

Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler highlighted the Federal aid issue when he declared that if Congress won't increase the Federal payment to the District it should not make District pay raises retroactive to last July.

District Commissioners Guy Mason and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young took the lead in presenting their revenue program in the opening of hearings before the House and Senate subcommittees in charge of District tax legislation.

Stress Sales Tax Need

Their program emphasized need for a 2 per cent general retail sales tax, and opposition to any boost in real estate taxes.

Fowler, spelling out the details, said the 18-million deficit-erasing program of new revenue calls for:

1. A 2 per cent retail sales tax exempting food and medicine and some other items. Revenue gain: 10 million dollars in the next fiscal year; $13,500,000 annually in future years.

2. Lowering the basic exemption in the unincorporated business income tax from $10,000 to $5000. Revenue gain: one million dollars a year.

3. Boosting the tax on spirits from 50 cents to $1.10 a gallon; put a 10-cent-per-gallon tax on still wine, and double all other alcoholic beverage taxes. Revenue gain: two million dollars a year.

4. Boosting the tax on beer from 50 cents to $1 a barrel. Revenue gain: $300,000 a year.

5. Doubling present District license fees. Revenue gain, $800,000 a year.

6. Keeping the present individual income tax law unchanged to the end of this year, instead of granting a basic personal income tax exemption of $5000 on income received this year, as proposed in one bill. Revenue retained for next year by keeping the present law on the books until the end of this year: $1,900,000.

7. Fowler said he believed that the city would not require both the increased Federal payment and the higher liquor taxes in the fiscal

U. S. Attorney to Act in Beating Of Cabbie if Facts Warrant It

By John London and Al Lewis
Post Reporters

The case of the cab driver who was savagely mauled at Thomas Circle January 14 will soon be turned over to the United States Attorney's office.

Police Chief Robert J. Barrett said yesterday he ordered Inspector Robert S. Bryant to turn the case over to the United States Attorney's office, "for any action they want to take," when the police investigation is completed.

Barrett has said he expects the investigation headed by Bryant will probably be completed by the end of this week.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay, when questioned by a reporter, said he intends to "go into the whole thing thoroughly," upon receipt of the police report.

"As soon as it is received," said Fay, "we will review the report and take whatever action the facts warrant."

The beaten cabbie is James Rowell, 48-year-old Yellow Cab Co. driver. A former clothing salesman, he had been driving a cab some seven months when beaten at about 4:45 a. m., January 14. He suffered a broken left arm, bruised ribs and lost three teeth.

Eleven days ago the hushed-up beating was discovered by reporters for The Washington Post. At the same time, these reporters sought the explanation for the sudden transfer from vice squad assignments of two policemen.

Father Charged With Assault In Beating of Son, 18 Months

A 24-year-old father was arrested by Montgomery County police yesterday on two counts of assault and battery which charge him with brutally beating his 18-month-old son.

The father is Billy W. Keith, a stock clerk in a Silver Spring garage, who lives at 12114 Selfridge rd., Viers Mill Village, Md.

The child, Billy W. Keith, jr., is in Children's Hospital with a fractured leg, an ulcerated ear and bronchial pneumonia.

An investigation was launched after the child was taken to the hospital Sunday night and the parents were unable to explain how the child suffered a leg fracture.

Detective Corpl. Frank Griggs of the county police said Keith's wife, Zelma, told him her husband flew into a rage and struck the child last Tuesday night, then repeated the performance last Saturday night.

She told him, Griggs said, that the father had been beating the child periodically for more than a year and that the ear became ulcerated because of repeated blows.

The warrants against Keith were sworn out by Mrs. Madeleine Fennell, director of social work for Montgomery County Juvenile Court.

She said the case was "one of the most sickening I have ever investigated." Mrs. Fennell said petitions have been prepared, asking Juvenile Court Judge Alfred D. Noyes to place the infant in the custody of the court.

After his arrest, Keith was taken to the Silver Spring substation where his total bond was set at $2000. He will receive a hearing in Silver Spring police court at 9:30 a. m. next Tuesday.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

Frankness of Fighting Editor Will Go With Gaston to Export-Import Bank Post

By naming Herbert E. Gaston chairman of the Export-Import Bank yesterday, President Truman stamped him as one of the newspapermen who have made good in public service.

Harris & Ewing
HERBERT E. GASTON
Deliberate, eager

Gaston has been an official in this city for almost 16 years, but has never assumed the self-importance of the long-term bureaucrats.

In his background and in his blood are years as a fighting editor, first in Spokane, then in Fargo and Minneapolis in the days of the Non-Partisan League, and finally in New York as night editor of the lamented World.

Reporters here usually found him clear and straightforward when he handled the Treasury's public relations and later, in the war years, when he was Assistant Secretary. Officials who dealt with him found him level-headed and competent.

Firm Against Hacks

Clamorous Congressmen who ran up against him when he was the Treasury's buffer against politicians found him fair but firm against appointing unqualified hacks to public office.

And there were years at the Treasury when this former editor was in charge of the department's far-flung enforcement activities, like the Customs, the Secret Service, and Elmer Irey's famous Intelligence Unit. In those years, Gaston was a rock of support and encouragement to the Treasury agents tracking down wrongdoing.

In official crises—and there must have been plenty of them at the Treasury in the war years—Gaston was said to have been as steady as if he were still in command of the news room on the Minneapolis Star.

He entered public service in New York State when Franklin D. Roosevelt was Governor and Henry Morgenthau, jr., was State conservation commissioner. Morgenthau brought him to Washington, first to the Federal Farm Board and then to the Treasury.

In 1945, when Morgenthau went back to private life, Gaston became a director of the Export-Import Bank, which was then the only effective American agency for lending money to war-ravaged nations.

Arm of Foreign Policy

The World Bank was still in its infancy, UNRRA was occupied chiefly with relief, and the European Recovery Program had not been thought of. So the Export-Import Bank, financed wholly by Congress, became a vitally important arm of American foreign policy, although it had been set up solely to help American export and import trade.

Since then the Bank's scope has been reduced, but it still has about 800 million dollars of unspent money. And Gaston will have the pleasant task of telling the House Appropriations Committee this morning that the Bank made a handsome profit for the Treasury in the past year.

Gaston is 67 now, gray-haired, deliberate in manner, but still as eager as a man much younger. He follows the American press with a watchful and sometimes disapproving eye, for he retains an editor's exacting standards.

With his wife, the former Ethel Bell, he lives in an apartment at 2219 California st. nw., with plenty of pictures of their two married daughters and their grandchildren.

Sometimes he can be seen walking along 15th st., near the Bank's office, with the indefinable manner of a newspaperman, still sniffing the air for a story.

800 Billion Put As Cost if '30s Slump Repeats

Another depression on the scale of the one of the 1930s would cost the country 800 billion dollars, Presidential Economic Adviser Leon H. Keyserling told Congress yesterday.

The "last and greatest depression in our history" Keyserling told the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, "cost the country 300 billion—about the same as World War II."

Not only would a depression cost us 800 billion, he said, "but it would certainly cost us our leadership in world affairs.

"It would certainly strengthen abroad the voices of those who say that our democratic system of free enterprise cannot work, and here at home it would produce millions of people who would join in that dismal chorus of despair.

"I believe," he added, "that our democracy would survive even such a crisis, but not without changes which none of us would like to contemplate and which all of us should dedicate our best efforts to avoid."

It was because of this "800 billion dollar question" that Keyserling said he welcomed the thorough study such as the joint committee is making.

If such studies, he said, lead to proper planning ahead of time, catastrophes such as the 1930 bust may be avoided.

"Last time," he said, "we tried to deal with fire prevention after the fire had started."

In making an analysis of the present situation, however, Keyserling assured the committee that in the present increase in unemployment reported by the Census Bureau, and a softening in some prices, he saw nothing to become aroused about.

"While total civilian employment dropped from 59 million in December to 57 million in January," he said, "about 1,300,000 of this two million decline was accounted for by reductions in the labor force due to seasonal factors.

"Actual civilian employment in January was above the level of any of the first three months of 1948, and 1948 was considered a boom year."

The outlook for 1949, Keyserling asserted, "is still bright, and by optimism combined with the right course of action we can keep it bright." But, he said, that outlook could be changed to a "gloomy one" within the year. As "elements of increasing danger," he listed:

1. The high cost of living in relation to personal incomes.
2. A "growing disparity" between the farm and industrial parts of the economy.
3. Sharp and continued price increases in some vital industrial products such as metals, fuel, lighting materials and house furnishings.
4. A drop in consumer expenditure or demand.
5. The size of corporation profits.
6. Failure of some basic industries like steel, aluminum and power to increase capacities.

He warned against "sensational magnification of a few soft spots in the economy, as well as against the recent increase in unemployment." Undue pessimism is as bad, he asserted, as too much optimism.

Living Standards Slipping

From 1941 to 1947, he declared, incomes of families in the lowest fifth of the scale have advanced 42 per cent; the next group 34 per cent and 18 per cent in the highest one fifth. Lately, he said, about one-fourth of the families with incomes under $2000 have had cuts, and another 45 per cent of them had no boosts in dollar income.

The result, he said, is that the standard of living, which has steadily bettered since 1939, is now slipping slightly. Possibly half the families in lower income groups, he said, are spending more than they earn or just barely breaking even.

Senators Will Make Retail Price Inquiry

The Senate Banking Comittee is going to investigate retail prices.

The committee yesterday approved a resolution by Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) for a "full and complete study and investigation of agricultural and other commodity prices, with a view to ascertaining the causes for unreasonably large spreads between prices received by farmers, manufacturers, and other producers and prices paid by ultimate consumers."

Senate Votes Extension of Export Control

The Senate yesterday passed unanimously a bill to extend wartime export controls until June 30, 1951. Present controls are due to expire March 1.

The measure now goes to the House, where the Banking Committee has recommended early approval.

President Truman requested the 28-month extension until the Administration can decide what can and cannot be shipped abroad.

Three Needs for Controls

Administration spokesmen say the controls are needed for three reasons:

1. To combat inflation at home by preventing foreign demand from bidding up prices of scarce goods.
2. To carry out the European Recovery Program by guaranteeing Marshall Plan nations first call on available supplies.
3. To prevent strategic war materials from going to Russia and other iron curtain countries.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said he would vote for the bill "because of the situation with Russia" but felt export restrictions "interfere with free trade and discourage development of American and foreign industries."

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) criticized "red tape and delay" in the Commerce Department's handling of controls, and said "continuation necessarily hampers foreign trade."

Chairman Tom Connally, (D., Tex.) of the Foreign Relations Committee, complained that the controls have throttled export of surplus edible oils such as cottonseed oil, and said "we should do something to stop this foolish situation."

Chairman Burnet R. Maybank, (D., S. C.) of the Banking Committee, which drafted the bill, replied that it contained a new clause which would permit the Secretary of Agriculture to intervene and get controls lifted from any farm commodity that is surplus in this country.

George Wants Tax Bill Delay, Questions Need of Increases

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said last night that any general tax revision bill should go over until next January.

George said that in his opinion no tax bill could clear Congress in any event before June or July and reductions in appropriations may make any tax increase unnecessary.

"It would be hazardous, dangerous and unwise to write a tax bill until this session is drawing to a close, and preferably it should go over to next session," he told The Washington Post.

The President in his State of the Union message recommended a four-billion-dollar general tax increase on corporations and individuals, exemptitng only the very low income brackets. In addition, he proposed Social Security changes involving a $2,882,000,000 payroll tax increase.

Social Security Question

George said a payroll tax increase may be necessary, depending on what extensions the House and Senate make in the Social Security Act, but he questioned the need of a general tax increase.

The Georgian added that any general tax legislation ought to be delayed "until we know whether we are headed into a deflationary economy."

He said he wasn't "strongly pessimistic or unduly optimistic" about the possibility of a recession "but we ought to know which way our economy is going before we tax. We could find we need an inflationary tax bill instead of a deflationary measure."

The Senate Finance chairman said he thought Congress could shave enough money from appropriations to avert a tax increase in any event.

"We could avoid the necessity of increasing our tax burden this year by making some reasonable cuts in expenditures," he said.

Suggest 5 Per Cent Cut

"We can easily save enough to meet any possible deficit and I think we could save enough to make a payment on the debt."

George said that while some 11 billion dollars in the budget is in the form of fixed costs, and cannot be cut, the 30-billion-dollar remainder "could and should be reduced to prevent waste. I think we could reduce it about 5 per cent."

Saying he was speaking "strictly for myself," and not for any member of the House Ways and Means Committee, which has the first crack at tax legislation, he said the fact remains that if the House group considers Social Security law changes before taxes as planned, it woul be physically impossible to clear a tax bill through the Senate before the close of the session.

The "wise" thing to do, he said, would be to refer a decision until congressional appropriations are far enough along to weigh Government revenue against probable expenditures.

Marshall Returns For Hospital Checkup

Gen. George C. Marshall visited President Truman at the White House yesterday and then went to Walter Reed Hospital for a week's checkup.

The former Secretary of State said he is feeling "very well."

After leaving the hospital where he had a kidney operation recently, he will go to his Pinehurst, N. C., home.

AFL Demands Unions Purge Reds in Canada

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Miami, Fla. Feb. 8.—A purging of Communists influence from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress was demanded today by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

The AFL leadership, which has long and successfully fought Red infiltration into its American unions, expressed shock on learning of the considerable influence wielded by Communists and party-line followers in the Canadian Congress.

The Canadian Trades and Labor Congress is made up chiefly of locals belonging to AFL international unions.

The AFL council did not say what action it would take should the Canadian Congress fail to take heed of its demand, but AFL President William Green left no doubt that if necessary the AFL units would be ordered to withdraw from the Congress. Such a step would be a crippling blow to the Congress, which gets the bulk of its financial suport from its AFL member units.

Action Follows Hearing

The action of the executive council, winding up a 10-day session here, was taken after a long hearing on charges preferred by the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks.

The Canadian affiliate of the railway clerks was suspended from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress some time ago for putting up a fight on behalf of the AFL Seafarers Union against the Canadian Seamen's Union. The latter group is Red-dominated, according to AFL President Green, and has much influence on the Congress. The suspension was later withdrawn, but the railways clerks went ahead to seek the ouster of the Congress leadership.

The AFL Council declared that there was no compromising this issue: the Communist must be thrown out of the Canadian Congress. "We can not and will not compromise with the Communists whose No. 1 objective, both in the United States and Canada, is the destruction of movements such as ours," the AFL council declared.

Legislative Program Finished

The council today completed its legislative program. Among other actions, the council called for voluntary controls on prices in preference to resumption of compulsory price controls "which should be employed only as a last resort"; for development of the Nation's natural resources; for creation of river valley authorities; for liberalization of the displaced persons act.

President Green will entrain for Washington Wednesday and testify on the Administration's one-package labor bill on Thursday. Action on readmission of the International Machinists Union to the AFL was put off until the next council meeting in May at Cleveland.

25 Million for Spain

New York, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—The Chase National Bank disclosed today that it has granted the Spanish government a short term loan of 25 million dollars.

World Court Plan Rights Held Nebulous

Through international courts proposed under the United Nations, Russia could hail the State of Washington into court for sustaining the recent dismissal of three alleged former Communists from the faculty of the University of Washington, Frank E. Holman, president of the American Bar Association, told the District Bar Association last night at the Hotel Mayflower.

"Before the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was passed by the United Nations General Assembly in Paris last December," Holman declared "the American Bar Association asked for time to permit adequate study of its final draft so the American people could be advised of what was being legislated in their behalf."

The answer was in substance, he said, that it was analogous to our own Declaration of Independence, a declaration of principles and not intended to be a legal document.

"When the declaration was passed in Paris there was no copy of the final draft in this country," he asserted, adding that not even our State Department had a copy of it. He said that, as to our basic rights, it "is nebulous and ambiguous," and charged that "the latter portion of (the document) sets up a collectivist concept of government for all the peoples of the world, including ourselves."

Holman said he was assured in a letter from Secretary of State Marshall last November 12 that the declaration was only to be a declaration of principles, of moral force only, to be implemented or not as the member states might decide.

"We now discover," he declared, "that the sponsors of the declaration are proposing that it should be immediately implemented by the covenant to be ratified as a treaty, and further implemented by and through the organization of international courts."

This program of implementation, he declared, contemplates the organization of "a whole system of new international courts whereby not only individuals (both private citizens and public officials) but also cities, counties and States in this country may be complained against not only by individuals and pressure groups in the United States but by individuals and pressure groups in Russia or any other country, and thus brought before an international tribunal and tried and punished."

He added Vishinsky or Molotov could be a complainant against the State of Washington and its courts for having recently sustained the dismissal of three University of Washington professors.

Holman was president of the Seattle, Wash., Bar Association in 1941.

70-Group Air Force Receives Approval

Legislation authorizing a 70-group Air Force was approved unanimously yesterday by the House Armed Services Committee.

As the Administration-sponsored measure was sent to the House floor, the group also went on record in favor of voting additional money this year to start building such a force.

The committee indorsed a plan to divert 800 million dollars asked by President Truman for universal military training for additional planes and men in the Air Force. It would provide 57 groups next year instead of 48 and funds for ordering 800 additional new aircraft.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said he will press for early House action on the authorization bill and urged the House Appropriations Committee to approve the switch of the UMT funds.

Meanwhile, Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services, discussed the 15-billion defense budget with President Truman. He told reporters after leaving the White House, that they talked over the Air Force program, UMT and the draft.

Without going into detail, Tydings declared this was connected with "certain statements coming out of the House." Apparently, he was referring to the strategy of Vinson and his committee of following up the 70-group authorization bill with an attempt to transfer 800 million dollars UMT money to the Air Force.

Mr. Truman and Defense Secretary James Forrestal favor the authorization bill—which sets limits for the Army and Air Force to permit better long range planning—but want to hold 1950 USAF appropriations to the $4,500,000,000 already in the budget.

The action of the House Committee in indorsing a switch of the UMT funds has no legislative effect, as it has no jurisdiction over appropriations. But it makes it plain that the move has strong support on Capitol Hill.

Under the Army-Air Force authorization bill voted out by the committee, the following limits would be fixed for the two services and their reserve components:

Army—A total of 837,000 officers and men, not counting 18-year-old one-year volunteers, reservists undergoing training or handling the reserve components. Of this number, not more than 33,500 may be regular commissioned officers and 9000 warrant officers.

National Guard—750,000 officers and men.

Reserves—980,000 officers and men.

Air Force—502,000 officers and men, not counting 18-year-old enlistees and reservists. A limit of 27,500 Regular commissioned and 4800 warrant officers is imposed.

Air National Guard—100,000 officers and men.

Air Reserve—500,000 officers and men.

Plane and group strength—An Air Force of 70 regular groups and 22 separate squadrons, plus 61 groups in the Guard and Reserve is provided; plus aircraft strength of 24,000 planes or 225,000 airframe tons; no more than 5200 planes or 42,500 airframe tons may be ordered in any one year.

Similar basic legislation was passed for the Navy and Marine Corps three years ago.

5 Colonels Slated for Promotion

Selection of five Marine Corps colonels for promotion to the rank of brigadier general was approved yesterday by President Truman.

Pollock

Those selected were:

Col. Edwin Allen Pollock, military secretary to the commandant of the Marine Corps, Washington.

Col. Randolph M. Pate, director of instruction, academic headquarters, Marine Corps schools, Quantico, Va.

Col. William J. Whaling, commanding officer, Marine barracks, Naval Base, Philadelphia, Pa.

Col. William S. Fellers, chief of staff, Troop Training Unit, Amphibious Training Command, Pacific Fleet, Coronado, Calif.

Col. James H. Strother, executive officer, Depot of Supplies, Philadelphia, Pa.

Actual promotions will be made individually when vacancies occur. Selections are based on the anticipated number of vacancies occurring during the current calendar year.

Colonel Pollock won the Navy Cross at Guadalcanal, th eLegion of Merit at Cape Gloucester, and the Bronze Star Medal at Iwo Jima.

He resides with his wife, Mrs. Mary E. Pollock and daughter Martha Jane, at 2358 N. Oakland st., Arlington, Va. They have a son, a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, now stationed at Quantico.

As Deputy Chief of Staff of the Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, during World War II, Colonel Pate was awarded the Legion of Merit for services in the Palau, Iwo Jima and Okinawa campaigns. He was later awarded a Gold Star in lieu of a second Legion of Merit for the Guadalcanal operation.

He presently resides with his wife, Mrs. Mary E. Pate, in quarters at Quantico.

Democratic Post Goes to Boyle

William M. Boyle, jr., former director of police in Kansas City, Mo., yesterday was named executive vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee with President Truman's hearty approval.

The appointment was announced at the White House by Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath after McGrath conferred with the President.

McGrath said he will remain as chairman but that Boyle will take over the administrative detail in operating Democratic headquarters here. The job carries no pay. Boyle practices law in Washington.

During the 1948 election campaign, Boyle served as chief assistant to McGrath and traveled with Mr. Truman on many of his campaign trips.

The son of a Denver, Colo., rabbi, Rose was killed in Germany March 30, 1945, while directing the Third Armored Division's fight to capture an important road junction. Rose won his way to the top from the ranks after enlisting in the Army at 17 during World War I.

Navy's New Supersonic Rocket Gives Missiles Terrific Push

Navy's unnamed rocket outblasts the V-2 at Inyokern, Calif.

The Navy revealed yesterday it has developed a large new piggy-back rocket for launching guided missiles traveling faster than sound.

It said the rocket, believed to be the largest of its type ever built, solves the problem of how to get guided missiles up to the high speeds at which they operate more efficiently.

The Navy's only reference to the rocket's tremendous speed was a terse statement that it is "high in the supersonic range." Sound travels at about 750 miles an hour at sea level.

It already has been flown successfully at the Naval Ordnance Test Center at Inyokern, Calif.

At the takeoff, the rocket provides nearly all of the power, exerting a push "considerably in excess" of the 75,000-pound thrust developed by the Nazi V-2 rocket.

(Dr. Ralph E. Gibson, director of applied physics laboratory of Johns Hopkins University, at Silver Spring, Md., described the booster rocket last night to members of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences in New York. Ramjet missiles and test vehicles using this type of launching power have been clocked at speeds of 2000 miles an hour in Navy tests, he said. The new booster, Dr. Gibson disclosed, was built for the Navy Bureau of Ordnance by the Allegany Ballistics Laboratory at Cumberland, Md., by the Hercules Powder Co.)

As speed builds up into the supersonic range, the ramjet cuts in. The rocket finally falls away to earth and the ramjet continues its deadly way toward its target.

The new rocket is a Buck Rogers-looking affair with a pencil-point nose and graceful tapering fuels to obtain its tremendous thrust.

U. S. Report on Atom Bombs Demanded by Soviet in U. N.

Lake Success, Feb. 8 (AP).—Russia demanded today that the United States tell the United Nations by March 31 how many atomic bombs the United States has.

The Soviet Union, in a 900-word resolution put before the U. N. Security Council, also lashed at the proposed North Atlantic pact.

Warren R. Austin, United States delegate, said the Soviet resolution was made up of all the "beans and different constituents" which Russia has put to the U. N. on the arms and atomic questions since the U. N. was formed.

The Security Council president, Dr. T. F. Tsiang of China, adjourned the meeting until Thursday so the Soviet resolution could be prepared for discussion then.

Jacob A. Malik, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, introduced two projects put up by Russia at the Paris General Assembly and defeated by large majorities there.

One was a demand for a one-third cut in the armaments of the five great powers—China, France, Britain, the United States and Russia.

The other was a demand for simultaneous treaties banning the atomic bomb and calling for world controls on atomic energy.

The resolution ended with a demand for the Big Five to supply no later than March 31 "complete data concerning their armed forces and all types of armaments, including atomic weapons."

Russia also brought up indirectly and for the first time in the Security Council the projected North Atlantic pact. The Russian resolution did not mention it by name but Austin in his reply on the resolution did identify it and said further that that proposed pact is entirely within the limits of the U. N. Charter.

The Russian resolution called on the Security Council to note "the creation of late of a number of groups and states headed by aggressive circles of certain great powers who are aiming at imposing their aggressive policy on other countries, who also increase the production of weapons and for this purpose are creating in all parts of the world air and naval bases which are in no way justified by the defense interests of these countries."

Paper Resents Air Force Attempt At 'Dictation'

By The Associated Press

The weekly publication Armed Force said yesterday the U. S. Air Force should be advised that "it is not in a position to dictate or control what is printed about the organization in privately owned, independent publications."

In an editorial, Armed Force also said it intends to fight what it regards "as an unrealistic and unhealthy concept of press relations" on the part of the Air Force.

It said:

"We serve notice that Armed Force will continue to criticize the actions or ideas of the USAF whenever they seem to merit criticism. In like fashion, we intend to support and aid the Air Force whenever we are convinced that its cause is worthy."

Armed Force is a privately-owned publication which circulates chiefly among veterans and members of the armed forces.

It said that Steve Leo, civilian director of press and public relations for the Air Force, invited its Air editor to the Pentagon and expressed displeasure over a recent editorial criticizing the Air Force for adopting a new blue uniform.

Andrews Resigns His Post As Assistant Navy Secretary

Mark Edwin Andrews' resignation as Assistant Secretary of the Navy was accepted yesterday by President Truman, effective next Tuesday.

The President, in a letter, said he was accepting the resignation "with very genuine regret." The letter said Mr. Truman was familiar with the "impelling personal reasons" which prompted the resignation and said "I have no recourse but to comply with your wish."

Andrews offered the resignation in a letter dated January 13, asserting that with "real reluctance" he had made the decision "to return to private life."

Mr. Truman commended him for his part in the development of the Armed Services Procurement Act of 1947.

Andrews, wealthy 45-year-old Texas oil man, lawyer and manufacturer, has held the Navy's junior secretaryship since January 21, 1948.

He told a reporter yesterday that he plans to return to Houston.

"After all, I've been away seven years," he said. "My home is there. I want to devote a little time to my business and my family."

Entering the Naval Reserve in 1942 as a lieutenant, Andrews rose to captain in charge of all Navy procurement policy by the end of the war. He was awarded the Legion of Merit for conducting "important contract negotiations" from July, 1942, to October, 1945.

He went on inactive duty August, 1946, after drawing up legislation that later became the Armed Services Procurement Act of 1947.

Berlin Called Bar To Early Big 4 Talk

'Machinations'

Reds Charge Finns Back Pact Moves

By Russell Hill
New York Herald Tribune News Service.

Paris, Feb. 8.—Foreign Minister Robert Schuman said today that a meeting of the Big Four would be impossible until the Berlin dispute had been settled.

He thus made it clear that France, which has been the most receptive of the three Western powers to the idea of such a meeting, will do nothing unless the Russians act to relieve the strained situation in Berlin.

Schuman also said the five Brussels Pact powers are feeling out other European countries, preparatory to inviting them to join the European consultative assembly. It was agreed in principle, he said, that Germany would be invited to send representatives to this body, being created as a result of the recent Western union talks in London.

It is "not impossible," he said, that the consultative assembly will be ready to meet in April.

Schuman would not say how many countires might become members, but he thought some "neutrals" might be wary of coming in because of the "political implications."

Answering a question as to whether Spain and Portugal would receive invitations, he said: "That is a question on which we must reflect. But as the European union is a democratic organization, one might imagine that member countries would have to have a democratic structure."

NYHT News Service

Moscow, Feb. 8.—Soviet attention was directed today toward Finland, where the governing Social Democratic group was found to be supporting "machinations" for the creation of a northern alliance of Scandinavian countries.

Notwithstanding the recent breakdown of Scandinavian talks, Trud, organ of the Soviet trade unions, reported persistent efforts to organize a separate Scandinavian pact. It attributed them to "expansionist elements" in Scandinavia.

Under the 10-year mutual assistance pact signed here last April, Finland is bound not to participate in any coalition directed against the Soviet Union. Since Russia has already declared the North Atlantic and similar pacts to be directed against her, Finland obviously is considered treaty-bound not to join them.

The Soviet attitude is that a Scandinavian alliance would become an appendage of a broader Western coalition and therefore is equally unacceptable.

Europeans Accept Italy

of questions raised yesterday by Norway's Foreign Minister Halvard Lange, some of them dealing directly with the treaty's terms, and some with the military assistance which Congress will be asked to approve after the treaty is ratified.

Lange and his aides visited the State Department again yesterday morning, and spent two hours discussing the treaty and related problems.

Officials present at the meeting declined to discuss it afterwards, but it was apparent that the Norwegians were worried about their security during the treaty negotiations and before the pact became fully effective.

The obvious American answer is that the United Nations Charter provides protection for any member that may be attacked. This is not enough, however, to reassure the Norwegians, who are uncomfortably aware of their common frontier with Russia in the far north, and of the defenselessness of their 1400-mile coastline.

The Norwegians also would like to know, as precisely as possible, what armaments they can expect from the military lend-lease program that will follow ratification of the treaty.

On this point the American authorities are believed to have been vague in their answers, and necessarily so, since details of the European rearmament program have not yet been worked out.

This much is sure, however: that no binding commitment will be made in advance about parcelling out military aid to this country or that, or about giving priority to any country in such a way as to tie the hands of the military planners.

The Administration wants to send its military aid request to Congress without any country-by-counry allocation. It would be surprising if any definite commitment could or would be made to the Norwegians at this time.

In spite of these and other uncertainties, the impression persists here that Norway will decide to enter the Atlantic pact. The warnings from Moscow have not deterred her until now, and the appeals from Stockholm for "neutrality" have not impressed her.

Denmark, with many misgivings, is expected to follow Norway into the treaty discussions. Sweden will stay out, for fear that any open Swedish link with the Western powers would send Soviet troops into Finland by way of reprisal and warning.

As for other Atlantic countries, Ireland is expected to stay out for the present, on the announced ground that any defense agreement with Britain is impossible as long as the six counties of northern Ireland remain in British hands.

Chancellory Wing Blasted

Berlin, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—German dynamite teams, under Soviet orders, today blew up the west wing of Hitler's war-wrecked chancellery. It was the first of some 50 blasts intended to obliterate the Nazi shrine.

There had been little advance publicity, and only a few strollers and newspapermen were on hand when the three-story stone structure crashed to the ground shortly before noon.

The entire east wall, including the famous balcony overlooking the Wilhelmplatz, was scheduled for destruction Wednesday.

The little stone platform in the east wall was the rostrum for many of Hitler's frenzied speeches to the great crowds who gathered whenever he spoke in the heyday of the Nazi regime.

The chancellery was built by the Nazis just before World War II as a sumptuous testimonial to the strength of their party.

Kravchenko and Russian Witnesses Exchange Threats

NYHT News Service

Paris, Feb. 8.—The libel suit brought against a French newspaper by Victor Kravchenko came very near becoming a general brawl today when, on several occasions, Kravchenko and Russian witnesses for the defense stood nose to nose and hurled threats at each other.

On one occasion the judge invited Kravchenko and the object of his wrath to have it out somewhere else.

Two of today's three witnesses were Russian and most of the fierce dialogues were in that language. They were too fast for the interpreters, who offered summaries when the combatants paused for breath. Once when they showed no sign of pausing, court guards separated them.

Kravchenko indicated his knowledge of French is not entirely negligible. He had made a passing reference to Premier Stalin, whereupon the witness, Nicolas Kolibanoff, interjected hotly, "Don't talk about my beloved leader." Kravchenko replied in perfect, if somewhat vulgar, French, expressing his opinion of Stalin. The phrase is translatable in principle but not in practice.

"I'll talk about him all I want," he continued. "I've waited for this chance all my life."

Kolibanoff got even later. "If you were not a witness," Kravchenko said, "I would tear your head off."

"I would tear off both of yours," replied Kolibanoff.

[The United Press reported that Mme. Ziniana Gorlova, Kravchenko's blonde, buxom first wife who testified against him yesterday, sat in the first row of the spectator's benches today. She is expected to return to the witness bar Wednesday.]

Belgian Premier Hopes For Early Big 4 Talks

Brussels, Belgium, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Premier Paul Henri Spaak said today that he hoped a Big Four meeting could be convened in the near future.

He stressed that such a conference should meet only after "extensive preparatory work" assuring its success.

Speaking at a Foreign Press Association luncheon, Spaak said he was "among those who believe that war is not inevitable."

Daughter Is Born To Chinese Wife Of Gen. Chennault

Shanghai, Feb. 8 (AP).—Retired U. S. Air Force Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault, 59, today became the father of a baby girl in Canton, his commercial airline office here was advised.

The daughter, named Claire Anna, weighed 7½ pounds. The mother, the former Anna Chan, Chinese newspaperwoman, was reported doing fine.

The couple was married December 21, 1947.

Chennault, leader of the famed Flying Tigers in the war with Japan and later the U. S. Fourteenth Air Force in China, was divorced by his first wife in Louisiana in 1945.

Group Votes $200,000 For Un-American Body

The House Committee on Un-American Activities seemed assured last night of $200,000 with which to carry on its work, despite the outcries of critics who hoped it would be hamstrung by the cutting of its funds.

A subcommittee of the House Administration Committee voted yesterday to give the group the $200,000—the same amount it had last year under Republican control, and the full amount the investigating group had requested.

The Nicest Distance Between Two Points

White sidewall tires available at additional cost.

In their admiration for Cadillac's beauty, and its wonderful world-wide reputation for quality and goodness, people sometimes undervaluate one of the greatest Cadillac virtues of all—its marvelous comfort. To ride in a Cadillac is to experience the supreme satisfaction that can be derived from personal transportation. The person at the wheel is the quickest to sense this—for he is the special beneficiary of Cadillac comfort. He enjoys, of course—in common with the other occupants of the car—the matchless benefits of Cadillac balance and springing and roadability. But he enjoys, in addition, the driving ease of a feather-light steering wheel; a quick, powerful, responsive motor that knows no counterpart for agility and smoothness; big, dominant brakes that are as soft to the pedal as sponge rubber; and an over-all sure-footedness on the highway that reduces driving strain to the minimum. Somebody has said that, once you have driven a Cadillac, you're unhappy at the wheel of any other car. Certain it is that a ride in a Cadillac—whether as driver or passenger—is the nicest distance between two points! Have you driven a 1949 Cadillac—or ridden in one? If not, you ought to do so. You are welcome in our showrooms at any time.

'Peace Drive' Faces Treaty Talk Test

By James E. Roper

London, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Russia's current "peace offensive" will face its first official test when Big Four representatives meet here Wednesday to resume talks on the proposed Austrian peace treaty, Western spokesmen said today.

Previous treaty discussions have been fruitless because of Russia's refusal to compromise disputed issues. The United States, Britain and France have reached agreement on all major points in the proposed treaty.

Western delegates said they would stand firm on most of the 18 controversial points. They expressed hope that Russia would be willing to yield on at least some.

An indication that Russia might give way was seen in the surprise appointment of Ambassador to London Georgi Zarubin to head the Soviet delegation to the peace talks.

Zarubin has just returned from Moscow, and it was believed his attitude here would reflect the latest aspects of Kremlin policy.

The Soviet delegates will be the only representative of ambassadorial rank at the talks. Samuel Reber will represent the United States, James Marjoribanks will speak for Britain and Philippe Berthelot heads the French delegation.

The last attempt to frame an Austrian peace failed last May 6, when Russia insisted that Austria should be compelled to grant Yugoslav claims for territory and reparations payments. The three Western countries were unwilling to grant all of the Yugoslav demands.

Since then, however, Yugoslavia has fallen from Communist grace, and the West hoped that Russia would be willing to yield a point.

However, Reber said a visit to the Soviet embassy had convinced him that Russia still considered the frontier question as one of the two most important questions remaining to be settled. He said that Russia's demand for a share of Austrian oil production appeared to be the other major issue for the new talks.

The United States delegate visited the other three delegates also, and obtained an informal agreement that Wednesday's session should be devoted to general statements of policy.

Trans-Jordan To Negotiate

Rhodes, Feb. 8 (AP).—Trans-Jordan agreed today to enter armistice talks with Israel at Rhodes.

Five other Arab nations also were reported from Cairo to have decided to start armistice conferences with the new Jewish state. A senior Arab League spokesman, reporting the decision, said the talks would not begin until termination of the now deadlocked armistice negotiations between Israel and Egypt.

The other five Arab nations are Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, Saudi-Arabia and Yemen.

Trans-Jordan's acceptance was announced by the office of acting U. N. mediator Ralph J. Bunche, who had invited the Adab nations to come here and seek a settlement of the Palestine war.

Bulgarian-Born Red 'Fanatic' Chosen to Lead Greek Rebels

Athens, Feb. 8 (AP).—John Ioannides, described in Greek police records as a bloodthirsty, dangerous and fanatic Communist, now heads Greek guerilla forces.

Ioannides

Announcement that the 47-year-old Bulgarian-born former barber is acting premier of the Nomadic mountain government was broadcast today by the rebel radio.

The successor to Markos Vafiades is well known to Greek police. They said he headed the execution squads of the Communist party and for years it was his job to "eliminate" party deviationists. His highly secret underground organization had power of life and death over members, authorities said.

A Greek army spokesman said Friday Markos was believed to have been executed by the rebels because he leaned heavily on Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, who is at outs with the Kremlin.

Greek authorities claim Tito has stopped supplying the Greek Communists with arms.

An extraordinary communique meanwhile announced the Greek national forces have recaptured Karpenissi, 75 miles northwest of Athens, from Communist rebels who fought stubbornly. Its capture was reported unofficially yesterday.

Juke Box Banned As Too Noisy for Liverpool Pubs

Liverpool, England, Feb. 8 (AP).—The licensing justices decided here today that the corner pub must remain British. That means no juke boxes.

Mrs. E. M. Jones, pub licensee, wanted to introduce one, and explained at length what it is. The box she wanted to install had to be converted to British peculiarities.

It had to be adjusted to take three British pennies instead of one nickel.

"Too loud," said the police.

The licensing justices pondered and said no juke boxes.

Shanghai Group Seeks Peace Talks

Shanghai, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—A "private" peace mission prepared today to seek contact with Communist leaders in captured Peiping as Acting President Li Tsung-jen warned high ranking officers to plan for possible continuation of the civil war.

The four-man "people's peace delegation," headed by former ambassador to Moscow, W. W. Yen, was scheduled to leave by air for Peiping Wednesday.

The Communist radio last night attacked Nationalist peace proposals as "cheap American-manufactured goods," and there had been no official indication that the Communists in Peiping would agree to talk with the Shanghai mission.

Dr. Kan Chieh-hou, who was to have been Li's personal representative on the delegation, abandoned plans to go after the Communist radio warned he would be "deported by the people" if he entered Communist-held territory.

A similar unofficial mission from Nanking is already in Peiping, and there were unconfirmed reports that it had met with limited success. The government's official peace delegation is standing by in Nanking for orders to star north.

Li, who flew here from Nanking today, told high officers of the National Defense Ministry that "we must be prepared against any attack."

There was no indication that Li told the officers the government considers peace negotiations entirely hopeless, but it was clear that once-high hopes for an early peace were waning.

19 Desert Ship In U. S. to Avoid Return to Poland

New York, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Nineteen seamen deserted the Polish motor ship Batory the last time it docked here to avoid going back to their Communist-dominated homeland, it was disclosed today.

The Gdynia-American Line admitted the mass desertions and said smaller groups had jumped ship in recent months from the Batory and its sister ship, the Sobieski.

Immigration officials said they were searching for the seamen.

Axis Sally Renounced Her American Home In Broadcast, Recordings Reveal to Court

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

"I tell you quite frankly that I don't care about seeing my hometown in America any more . . . I am sticking on the German side because the German side is the right side . . ."

That commitment, voiced by a woman identified as Miss Mildred E. (Axis Sally) Gillars, yesterday came to the ears of Federal Judge Edward M. Curran and a District Court jury via earphones in the courtroom where Miss Gillars stands accused of treason.

The silver-haired defendant, too, listened to the remarks as plucked by Government monitors from the airwaves August 25, 1943, and recorded. If they upset her, she gave no indication at the time, but an hour later she complained of feeling faint and the trial was recessed until today.

Will Appear Again Today

It was during the noon lunch recess that Miss Gillars, after eating a pork chop platter taken to her by her half-sister, Mrs. Edna Herrick of Ashtabula, Ohio, complained of feeling ill.

Mrs. Margaret Aukward, nurse on duty in the court cell block, notified Judge Curran who after a conference with counsel ordered the recess.

"I'm not the fainting kind," Miss Gillars remarked apologetically to attendants as she was escorted to a United States Marshal's car to be driven back to District Jail.

Jail officials reported later that an examination in the prison infirmary showed that "essentially nothing was physically wrong" with Miss Gillars. They said that she was considered to be in good enough condition to appear in court today.

Purpose of Broadcasts

Before the playbacks of the Nazi broadcasts, Hans Richter, former German radio official, questioned by Prosecutor John M. Kelley, Jr., declared:

"The purpose of the broadcasts was to make people not to follow the policies of the Administration and their war effort."

Not only did Axis Sally's voice disown "my hometown in America" but it also, in bitter accents, told American wives, sweethearts and mothers that their men in uniform were "murderers."

A male announcer opened the broadcast saying in part: "Here is 'Midge' (identified by witnesses as the name used by Miss Gillars) back at the microphone with greetings from American prisoners of war to their folks back home." [The recording, however, carried no such messages.]

Then came The Voice, modulated in the best charm school manner with the clipped "r's" sounding like "d's."

'To the Women of America'

"This is Midge speaking, speaking to the women of America . . . Well, last night was the terror raid over Berlin . . .

"Last night I purposely did not go down into my shelter. I was aware that flying through the heavens were my countrymen. Soldiers, and being soldiers, forced to carry out orders and these orders come from Franklin D. Roosevelt . . . and women, they're not only being sacrificed by the thousands but they are also murderers. I've told you that before, but tonight I'm really standing here, as I said before, as an eye-witness.

"The bombs went whizzing and whistling and crashing all around my little apartment last night. My little home sweet home and I, an American girl, sat up there on the very top floor with the awareness that they were my countrymen . . ."

"Well, I sat around there for some time thinking about this, feeling so frightfully unhappy that America should be taking these aims to deal with Germany and after all wars have always been and wars always will be, won't they? But suppose you have a personal grudge against someone. What do you do about it, girls? You fight it out with the person with whom you have the grudge . . . or do you begin smashing other people right and left?

"It's Roosevelt's Orders"

"No, you just deal properly with the person with whom you have the said grudge. Well, so why don't the men (pause) take care of their problems at the front. No, it's Franklin D. Roosevelt's orders to bombard innocent, helpless women and children . . ."

(There followed a recording of a dance tune "Hometown.") The Voice: "Just a sweet little old piece, 'Home Town.' That's one piece which always made me feel homesick, you know. Well, girls, I think that there's nothing at the moment which could make me feel homesick in America anymore.

"And I'm very happy that I (pause) experimented the way I did last night by staying up in my apartment and not going down into the shelter, by proving in a way to myself that I am sticking on the German side because the German side is the right side and it is the Gentile side. Girls of America, don't forget that this is a war of Gentiles against the Jews . . ."

Jews Assailed Again

On another record played for the jury the Voice uttered the familiar line about Jewish perfidy.

"The Jews are in this war, have got us into this war not for an ideal, not for the love of humanity but (pause) for money.

"They have no feeling for the Soul of America, they've no feeling for the song of the whippoorwill, for the beautiful maple trees in summer . . . no, the Jews are sending our men over to Europe to fight so that their money bags will get filled."

Earlier, Von Richter identified the voice of Prof. Otto Koischwitz in several propaganda broadcasts along with that of Miss Gillars.

Koischwitz, now dead, was, according to Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin, the mysterious intellectual who exerted a baleful hypnotic influence over the defendant.

The trial will be resumed at 10 a. m. today.

Forcible Rape Charge Is Denied By Prizefighter

St. Joseph, Mo., Feb. 8 (AP).—A charge of forcible rape was filed against Welterweight Vincent Lee Foster, jr., yesterday.

Foster

Foster, 22, is the hard-hitting prizefighter who recently gained wide attention in national boxing circles by knocking out Tony Pellone in New York's Madison Square Garden.

A 22-year-old Kansas City woman signed the complaint. Foster, who is married, denied the charge.

The boxer was arraigned and released under $10,000 bond.

Demand Freedom for Mindszenty," and "Mindszenty Is Innocent."

The demonstrators marched to the Hunarian Consulate, where they shouted for Balassa. He finally appeared and told the demonstrators:

"I am resigning as of this moment. My opinions are the same as yours."

Balassa called a press conference to denounce Mindszenty's "mock trial . . . which oversteps the bounds of human, moral and God-like decency" and charged that the cardinal's confession had been "wrung from him by torture."

"I know that the consequences of my decision will be the loss of my Hungarian citizenship," he said. "I know that the consequences will be the confiscation of my modest goods in Hungary. I know that at an age of 49, with family, it is difficult to begin life anew, but I am determined to do it, as a Protestant, because the sacrificial and patriotic spirits of Mindszenty and (Bishop) Ordas gave me the power of action."

(Protestant Bishop Ordas was sentenced to two years in prison by the Hungarian government last fall on a charge currency manipulation.)

It was disclosed that of the six consulate staff members in New York, all but one were resigning.

Italians Reported Building Up Army

Rome, Reb. 8 (AP).—Defense Minister Randolfo Pacciardi announced today Italy is building a highly mobile, well-equipped army.

He told the pro-government Republican Party's national congress he plans to build it to 12 modernized divisions.

The peace treaty limits Italy to an army of 250,000. It now is believed to have five or six divisions of 10,000 men each.

Cardinal's Sentence Stirs Wide Protest

VILMOS OLTI
Sentenced Mindszenty

U.S. Denounced By Hungary

termed the sentence too "light" in a formal motion which the court accepted for transmission to the appeals court.

Sole Spoken Word

The cardinal's sole spoken word to the court, which reduced the charge against him from "leading" a conspiracy to "complicity," was "Yes" when asked if he wanted to appeal.

The appeal was granted and he was led back to his two-room prison within the block-square building.

In his comment on his sentences, Chief Judge Vilmos Olti accused Chapin of abetting Cardinal Mindszenty in a scheme to overthrow the republic. Chapin even asked the cardinal to gather information for him, Olti asserted.

"Nonsense," Says Chapin

Olti claimed Chapin's and Mindszenty's machinations were all part of a great Anglo-American plan to suppress democracy the world over.

Chapin at once replied: "It is what would be expected.

"The implications concerning me in the court president's final remarks, as the allegations during the proceedings implying improper conduct on my part or on that of the legation, are nonsense and pure fantasy."

Chapin stressed that official comment was difficult since Hungary did not allow a single Western diplomatic observer to attend the trial.

"My demand to have a legation observer present has not even been answered," Chapin said.

Property Confiscated

Mindszenty and his six co-defendants were given sentences that ranged from three years to life. Their property was confiscated, they were deprived of civil rights and were ordered to pay the costs of their trial. None will endure hard labor.

In every case but one the court reduced the charge from "leading an organization concerned with the overthrow of the . . . republic" to "accomplices to treason."

Prince Paul Esterhazy, 47, who had been accused of "giving essential financial support," instead was charged with "encouraging" the organization.

All except Esterhazy and Dr. Andras Zakar, 37, the cardinal's secretary, appealed their sentences.

Extenuating Factors

The court listed these extenuating circumstances for Cardinal Mindszenty: (1) His "true confession" and expression of regret; (2) his desire for "peace" between church and state; (3) his "unrealistic" ecclesiastical life, and (4) Chapin aroused his hope of a third war.

Mindszenty was found guilty on two counts involving treason; three on speculation, and, one on smuggling foreign currency abroad. The last was added by the court.

Mindszenty's codefendants and their sentences were:

Justin Baranyay, Budapest University professor, 15 years.

Dr. Zakar, the cardinal's secretary, six years.

Prince Esterhazy, once the wealthiest man in Hungary, 15 years.

Father Miklos Nagy, Catholic Action secretary, three years.

Dr. Bela Ispanky, Jesuit priest, life.

Dr. Laszlo Toth, Catholic journalist, 10 years.

Commenting on a protest British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin read before a Catholic rally in London last night, Boldiszar said:

"We find it repugnant that the Labor government, through its spokesman, which from Greece to Malaya everywhere acts as an oppressor of human rights and against which people everywhere revolt, dares to express an opinion of this trial."

He said Bevin's reaction was "proof of the anger and impotency of the Western imperialist powers caused by the attitude of Cardinal Mindszenty during the trial. It shows that one of their agents gambled and lost and that they do not even have the chivalry to recognize it."

Cardinal Hears Life Sentence . . .

Associated Press Radiophoto

BEFORE PEOPLES COURT—Josef Cardinal Mindszenty (left), Hungary's primate, stands quietly with hands clasped and hears himself sentenced to life imprisonment in a convicts' prison. Prof. Justin Baranyay, teacher of church law at the University of Budapest, is sentenced to 15 years. A uniformed guard is seated between them in the Budapest courtroom yesterday

Archbishop of Berlin, Germany: "The case is in fact a fight against the fundamental rights of human life; against the right of conscience against Christendom. This infamous judgment will open many eyes."

In Washington Republicans in the House of Representatives unanimously adopted a declaration of "indignation and condemnation" of the Budapest trial. Some Congressmen suggested that the United Nations should investigate the trial and charges of treason brought against the Cardinal.

Robert P. Patterson, former Secretary of War, told a luncheon group in New York the "torture and persecution" suffered by the Hungarian primate should inspire all Americans to safeguard the liberties that are ours."

In the French National Assembly a number of deputies made bitter protests against the sentencing.

In London, L. W. B. Teeling, Conservative member of Parliament served notice he will ask Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, to consider breaking off negotiations for a trade treaty with Hungary.

The Communists did not have much to say.

The Soviet news agency Tass in a dispatch released in London disposed of the conviction with an 83-word news item. The dispatch from Budapest merely listed the sentences of the Cardinal and his co-defendants, but did not mention the charges.

Query on Protestants' Whereabouts Raised

What has happened to the leaders of the various Protestant faiths arrested by the Communist-controlled government of Hungary?

This question was raised yesterday by John Flournoy Montgomery, former United States Ambassador to Hungary, in commenting on the conviction of Cardinal Mindszenty.

"Bishop Ordas and other Protestant leaders have likewise been victims of Communist attack and leaders of the various Protestant churches have been compelled to go into retirement rather than face persecution," declared Montgomery in response to inquiry from The Washington Post about his views on the Mindszenty trial.

He said that unlike the case of Cardinal Mindszenty, "others are still under arrest, their whereabouts unknown, and have never yet been tried and may never be."

(Evangelical Bishop Lajos Ordas was arrested by the Hungarian government last September on a charge of "foreign currency manipulation" and sentenced to two years in prison.—Editor's Note.)

Montgomery, who was the last United States Ambassador to Hungary before the Reds gained control of the government and who headed the embassy from 1933 to 1941, said the conviction of Cardinal Mindszenty "was decided before his arrest."

The former diplomat said he did not believe the Hungarian government showed leniency in giving Cardinal Mindszenty a life sentence.

"On the contrary, death would have been merciful compared to imprisonment under conditions that exist in Russia and Soviet-dominated countries," he said.

Paper's Stunt Brings Fines

Cleveland, Feb. 8 (AP).—The editor of the Cleveland Press and three of his employes were fined a total of $1000 today because the newspaper faked a divorce decree in an attempt to prove carelessness in the courts.

The victim of the press stunt, Common Pleas Judge Samuel H. Silbert, fixed the fines after the editor, Louis Seltzer, read a statement conceding that the contempt of court charge was accurate.

"However, Your Honor," he said, "it was at no time our intention to bring your court into disrepute."

Who Wants Men's Slacks at $3....?

Apparently everybody in Washington does—because the hundreds and hundreds of people who crowded our Men's Department yesterday gave ample evidence of the fact. We advertised 700 pairs of slacks at $3—and we only wish that we had had 7,000—because a lot of our good friends and good patrons must have been disappointed after the merchandise was sold out—actually, before noon yesterday. Meantime, you have no doubt observed many other such efforts on the part of the Goldenberg Company to bring prices down to the level at which people can afford to buy. This has been made clear in our Home Furnishings Departments and in our Fashions Departments as well as other divisions of our store. We shall continue to do everything in our power to bring retail prices into adjustment with the public pocketbook, and within the ability of the average family to supply its daily needs. So far as our sale of men's slacks at $3 is concerned—we are doing our level best to secure additional quantities of the same merchandise—from the same manufacturers—to be given to you at the same price—and we hope to have some good news for you on this within the next few days. Meantime, we take this occasion to thank you for your friendship and your patience—and we ask you to watch for the announcement of this new merchandise, which will appear in the paper as soon as it is received in our store.

D. C. Asks Congress For 4 Million More year starting July 1, 1950, and suggested tnat Congress make one of the proposals effective for only one year.

Late in the hearing, District Commissioners and their fiscal aides were taken aback to hear Alan W. Payne, chairmna of the District Alcholic Beverage Control Board, urge caution on the proposal to double liquor tax rates. He said the ABC board did not believe doubling taxes would double revenue, but instead might kill "the goose that lays the golden egg." He said the tax on beer could be not only doubled but could be increased as much as six times without detriment to that industry.

Commissioner Mason said he was very much surprised at Payne's testimony on the liquor taxes.

Payne did not oppose the liquor tax increase outright. "The board's conclusion," he said, "is that if it should be possible to find other equitable means of increasing the over-all District income, alcoholic beverage taxes should not be increased. If, however, such other means cannot be found, then this board cannot, and does not, oppose the increased tax rates on such beverages. This board only hopes that, if the future shows local revenues have materially increased, the beverage taxes will then be reduced."

He said the sales tax and higher liquor taxes would add about 18 cents per fifth of liquor to the present District tax of about 10 cents per fifth. He said a sixfold hike in beer taxes would increase the District tax per 12-ounce bottle from 1.5 mils to an amount still less than 1 cent.

District Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent told the committee that real estate taxes and the sales tax are now the only two sources that will provide large amounts of new District revenue. He opposed any further property tax increase. He recalled the property tax increases—made up of higher rates and increased assessments—ordered two years ago.

Nearly Twice 1936 Figure

He said property taxes now are producing nearly 32 million dollars a year, nearly twice what they produced in 1936.

Chairman Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) of the Senate revenue subcommittee asked what a District sales tax would produce if it had no exemptions. Fowler estimated the yield would be around 17 or 18 million dollars—close to the total deficit now expected for next year.

Representative Robert E. Jones, jr. (D., Ala.), wanted to know what a 3 per cent sales tax would produce here. About 20 million dollars, Dent estimated.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West pointed out the sales tax legislation for the District is substantially the same as the sales tax law now operating in Maryland.

Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) asked West whether the sales tax would fall on services. West said it would apply only where the services produce a tangible article—as when a man takes cloth to a tailor and the tailor makes a suit for him. He said there would not be a tax on services like repair of a radio, or maid service in a private home.

Favors Monthly Returns

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.), after hearing that District officials now plan to collect the sales tax from merchants by quarterly returns, announced that he favors monthly returns. Chairman Hunt suggested a sliding scale of allowances for merchants to cover their costs of handling the sales tax collections. The bills now call for a flat 3 per cent allowance. Hunt said the fair way would be to allow, possibly, 5 per cent to a merchant who collects $10 or less in taxes a month; 4 per cent for those who collect up to $100; 3 per cent for those who collect up to $750; 2 per cent for those who collect up to $1000, and 1 per cent for tax collections over $1000.

Anti-Red Oath Is Defended

T-H law ought to be more clearly defined by Congress.

"People engaged in business should know whether the law applies to them in a particular case, or whether it doesn't," Taft said.

The law now carries a broad provision making it applicable to all activities affected by interstate commerce.

Taft Hartley repeal would wipe out several of the "unfair labor practices" provisions under which unions now are liable.

In telling the committee there is no reason why unions should be exempted in many cases as they would be under the Administration bill, Denham said:

"Unions have grown up. They don't need to be babied or petted any more."

He added that unions are big enough now so that "they can be just as independent as big business."

The Administration measure would knock out the present requirement that unions should bargain collectively in good faith. Taft asked whether they should continue to be required to do so.

"It is perfectly obvious that they should," Denham replied.

He said that in many cases under the old Wagner Act, unions just laid a contract on the table and told employers to take it or a picket line.

"Just as employers did before the Wagner Act?" Taft inquired.

"That's right," Denham replied.

Except for the mandatory injunction provision in the case of secondary boycotts, Denham defended the use of court orders against unfair labor practices.

"The mere fact of the injunction provision tends to bring (the disputants) together more rapidly," Denham said.

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) disagreed. He recalled that William H. Davis, former War Labor Board chairman, testified that injunctions make for bad relations between workers and employers.

Montgomery Teachers Ask Scheduled Raises

A delegation of Montgomery County teachers yesterday asked the county board of education to include an estimated $189,000 in the 1950 budget as the first step in placing teachers on full salary schedule.

Mrs. Elizabeth MacDonald, president of the Montgomery County Teachers Association, told the board it would take approximately $296,000 if all teachers were put on the salary schedule adopted by the board 2½ years ago.

Lack of funds has prevented the county from paying the teachers what they are entitled to receive under the schedule.

A plan submitted by Mrs. Macdonald calls for teachers to receive a portion of the extra funds in 1950, and the rest the following year.

Extra allowances during the past several years "haven't kept pace with the growth or population and the devaluation of the dollar," she said.

Assistant Superintendent Richard E. Carpenter told the board that school building alterations costing $30,000 will be required if a proposed fire code is adopted. This will include installation of panic bolts, flameproofing of stage curtains, connecting movable chairs in groups of five in places of assembly, and fireproofing stairwells.

A county-wide census conducted by parents and teachers last year showed that the population of children has increased 8029 in two years, the board was told.

The number of white children under 21 has jumped from 34,308 to 42,255 and of Negro children from 3769 to 3851, it was stated.

Carpenter reported that 30 war surplus buildings ordered by the board of education for use as shops may have to be converted to classroom buildings next year to relieve overcrowding.

Schools Get 'Interneship'

Prince Georges County Board of Education yesterday set up an "interne principalship" in the county school system for training of University of Maryland education students.

Named to the "interneship" was a 25-year old graduate student, Howard J. Skidmore of Greenbelt, who will act as assistant principal —without pay—at Surratsville High and Elementary School and at Bladensburg Junior High School for an 18-week period.

During that time, Skidmore, a former Greenbelt High School teacher, will study administrative procedure, and gain "practical experience in school administration."

The board appointed Melissa S. Boyd, guidance counselor at Laurel High School, assistant principal there, and named Dr. Doys A. Shorb a trustee of Beltsville Elementary School. Dr. Shorb succeeds Dr. Earl E. Berkeley, whose resignation was accepted last month.

New Storms Hit West; More Due

By The Associated Press

Bad weather walloped the blizzard-burdened West with triple-barreled blows again yesterday—and still another storm was whistling down out of Alaska.

A 50-mile-an-hour Canadian storm blustered down upon Montana and eastern Washington, after part of it swung across Washington at daybreak. Snowslides jammed shut both major cross-State highways.

Bitter cold rolled down out of Canada and stung North Dakota, Montana and Wyoming. The sub-zero wave threatened to hit Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois by today.

Devastating blizzards in Wyoming spoiled 24 hours' work by the Army's weary snowplow crews. Drifting snow reblocked more than 2300 miles of Wyoming roads that the soldiers had opened. About 4000 persons were marooned on 28 stalled trains.

Northern California, still groggy from weekend storms, braced itself for a new storm tonight. The San Francisco weatherman said it wouldn't be as severe as the two before it—but it won't be the last.

Still another disturbance forming in Alaska is expected to sweep down on northern California Thursday or Friday.

The rest of the Nation had generally fair weather. The South was warm and the East Coast had seasonable temperatures. It was mild in the Ohio Valley and in the lower and middle Mississippi Valley.

Forest Service tractors dug their way to the rescue of northeast Oregon ranchers. Twenty families were cut off by 15-foot drifts. A bus driver and 25 children dug five hours to travel 10 miles.

ilies from threatened suffocation in their snow-covered houses at Rawlins, Wyo.

Snowslides killed two children playing near their Pocatello, Idaho, homes, and a silver miner at Park City, Utah.

The Southern Pacific, which said earlier that trains would operate as usual Tuesday, canceled all its transcontinental trains except the Overland Limited.

Baptists Ask Liberalized Laws on DPs

A Baptist group yesterday passed resolutions calling for liberalized displaced persons legislation, and opposing Federal educational aid for private schools.

The group is the Baptist Joint Conference Committee on Public Relations. It claims to represent 14 million members of the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions, the National Baptist Convention, Inc., and the National Baptists of America.

Meeting at the Baptist building, 1628 16th st. nw., 40 members of the committee announced approval of the McGrath-Neely Displaced Persons Bill. Approval also was given to an identical bill introduced in the House by Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.).

The McGrath-Neely and Celler bills call for admission of 400,000 DPs to the United States. They would allow DPs who entered the American zones before April 21, 1947 to emigrate. Legislation passed by the Eightieth Congress provided for admission of 200,000 DPs, but barred those who entered the American zones after December 22, 1945.

The resolution on Federal aid to education urged Congress to defeat attempts of any church groups to obtain public funds for parochial schools.

Approved by the committee was a report on religious liberty submitted by the Rev. Dr. E. B. Willingham, pastor of National Baptist Memorial Church, 16th st. and Columbia rd. nw. The report asserted that revision or reversal of interpretations of the First Amendment to provide Federal aid to parochial schols is the aim of the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

Tavern Bill Seeks Curfew

A bill aimed at cutting juvenile delinquency in Prince Georges County by keeping minors out of taverns after 9 p.m. was sent to the Prince Georges legislative delegation yesterday in Annapolis.

Recommended by the county's Juvenile Court Advisory Committee, the bill, if enacted, will make it unlawful for holders of Class B or Class D alcoholic beverage licenses to permit persons under 21 to enter or remain on the premises of such establishments between 9 p.m. and 6 a.m.

The proposed ban, however, would not apply if the minor were accompanied "by at least one of his parents or legal guardian."

The bill was drawn up by the advisory group's subcommittee on legislation, which consisted of Attorney Jerrold V. Powers, chairman, Ralph W. Brown, chief of county police, and A. Gwynn Bowie, State's attorney.

Bowie said the "very presence" of minors in such places "whether they drink or not, is one of the greatest contributing factors to juvenile delinquency" in the county.

"If the bill is enacted, we can to the extent of 99 per cent keep minors out of these places after bedtime," Bowie said. The proposed bill, however, sets up no penalties for violations.

Mangled Bill

The vote of 306 to 9 in the House of Representatives for the bill giving President Truman authority to reorganize the Government is an impressive showing of support for the general idea behind the report of the Hoover Commission. That group, composed of legislators, administrators and distinguished citizens, has conclusively demonstrated the need for straightening out lines of authority as well as organization. Billions of dollars, it says, can be saved by consolidating agencies rendering similar services, by giving additional power and working tools to administrators, and by advancing the more capable men in the public service to top positions. At least the general sentiment behind these reforms is all but unanimous.

Where the House fell down was in tacking amendments onto this highly essential bill. Both President Truman and the Hoover Commission are eager to give the President general reorganization powers subject only to the rejection of specific plans by concurrent resolution in Congress. Mr. Hoover was most emphatic in his condemnation of the attempts to win special exemptions for individual agencies when he appeared before the Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures. In the face of widespread protests and in open revolt against common sense, the House voted to restrict the reorganization of seven different agencies to separate organization plans.

The crippling nature of these amendments is obvious. Foremost among the agencies so named are the Armed Services. Presumably a reorganization plan dealing with those services alone could not transfer to any other agencies such functions as the civilian duties of the Army Engineers. The military arm of the Government, as Mr. Hoover points out, is one of those most urgently in need of reorganization. Much of the hope for economy through more efficient operations centers in this costly establishment. It is incredibly shortsighted to hamper its improvements before Congress has had an opportunity even to see what organization the President has in mind for it. The same can be said in lesser measure for application of the one-package arrangement to such agencies as the Railroad Retirement Board and the National Mediation Board. There is no rhyme or reason in according special treatment to some agencies and not to others. All the advocates of simplified and efficient government will look to the Senate to correct this unfortunate blunder.

Ships to Aid ECA

Since passage of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948 a disguised subsidy for American tramp shipping has been tucked into the ERP. This is admittedly a makeshift arrangement, and in our opinion an improper one. It exacts tribute from the European nations whose economic health we are trying to rebuild by reducing the amount of Marshall Plan funds they can put into recovery goods. The money, to be sure, comes from the American taxpayer. But the taxpayer is not getting full value in terms of helping western Europe to become free of American aid.

The Bland bill—H. R. 1340—now before the House Merchant Marine Committee, would continue this concealed subsidy under added requirements so rigid as to increase the levy on European recovery—if they did not make the shipping program entirely unworkable. The demand that 50 per cent of all Government-financed cargoes—broken down by country, by class of cargo, by direction of flow, and including even third-country trade—be carried in American bottoms is an incredible example of asking for pie in the sky.

The fact is that high-cost American shipping industry cannot operate in world competition without subsidy. Scheduled lines now receive a subsidy given openly, on the merits of the case. The same should be true of American tramp shipping. If this country needs a fleet of operating tramp freighters, the decision should be made and the necessary subsidy supplied in full view of the American taxpayer. To do it under cover of the ERP is neither a candid nor a permanent solution. And to do it in such a way as to hamper the recovery of Norway, for example—a country that depends on maritime trade for its very livelihood and that we are now courting—is to get our domestic and foreign policies at cross purposes.

Also before the Bland committee is a bill to extend the Maritime Commission's power to sell and charter war-built ships to American flag operators. Here, we believe, is an opportunity for constructive action that would further rather than retard the purposes of the Marshall Plan. Certain of the European countries, notably Italy, are suffering lowered standards of living because of overpopulation. Such non-European countries as Brazil and Australia, on the other hand, are anxious for new immigrants. The block is principally in lack of cheap ocean transport.

A provision permitting Italy, as the country where the population problem is most acute, to charter a limited number of laid-up Liberty ships, for the limited period of ERP, and for the limited purpose of carrying emigrants, should not be objectionable to the American merchant marine. The ECA could provide the charter fees in dollars, the charterers could provide operating expenses in their own currency out of their counterpart funds, and everybody would be happy in making the wheels of world economy run a little more smoothly.

Mindszenty's Sentence

It had been supposed by many persons on this side of the iron curtain who are familiar with Communist reasoning that in having decided to challenge in such direct terms so powerful an adversary as the Catholic Church, a sentence of death would be passed and executed upon Cardinal Mindszenty as a means of spreading terror or despair among recalcitrants in Poland, Czechoslovakia and other satellite countries, where the church affords the remaining means of opposition to the police regimes. Since the prosecution as well as the defense has appealed the sentence of the court, punishment by death is still possible. The probability, however, is that the sentence of the court was dictated from Moscow and will therefore stand.

This leads to the question why the Kremlin chose to spare Cardinal Mindszenty from death on the gallows. Various conjectures are possible. If, as most of his statements previous to his arrest would indicate, the cardinal had anticipated death at the hands of his enemies and had prepared himself for it, then life in a Communist prison would be the crueler punishment. Another possibility is that Moscow has further hopes of breaking the spirit and resolution of its victim and of using him as an instrument or puppet in some plan for setting up a national church which would break off allegiance to the Vatican, as was done in the case of the Uniate Church of the Ukraine. This hypothesis is tenable only if one accepts the theory that Cardinal Mindszenty's will and personality have already been destroyed by ingenious tortures or by chemical means. Another possibility is that the Kremlin has recognized that the outright martyrdom of the cardinal, and the cult that would immediately arise about his name and memory, would soon offset whatever propaganda effect they may have hoped for from his public humiliation.

This last consideration, of course, would be somewhat alien to Marxist thought, which recognizes no power save material power, none but material values. In this connection we may recall the cynical question, put by Stalin at the Potsdam Conference, concerning the number of armed divisions under command of the Pope. Yet of the three possibilities considered we are inclined to think most plausible is that of fear of a cult arising as the result of the death of the martyred cardinal.

Indeed it is not inconceivable that the Kremlin is already bewildered and perhaps a little frightened by the anger the case has aroused everywhere throughout the West and by the extent to which it has been shared and expressed by so many Protestants and Jews as well as Catholics. The Communists in counting, as they probably did, on the historic fears and jealousies arising from the universal claims of catholicism, have forgotten perhaps that they themselves are priests of an oecumenical religion of power, and that the hostility and fear their religion arouses among the followers of all theistic faiths exercises a cohesive rather than a divisive influence.

That the Communists are ruthless and, where the world revolution is concerned, conscienceless, hardly needs at this date to be argued. But there is yet no proof that this exempts them from the stupidity that almost invariably accompanies the possession of plenary power. Indeed, we are now inclined to think that the Mindszenty affair has been a plain proof to the contrary.

Austria: New Try

Renewed conversations in London among deputies of the Big Four Foreign Ministers on a treaty with Austria are the seventh such attempt since the end of the war. Previous negotiations have succeeded in eliminating many of the original points of difference between Russia and the Western powers and in considerably narrowing the gap on others. Changed circumstances since the last meeting broke up in May, 1948, suggest a cautious hope that all the remaining issues may be resolved this time. But experience suggests that new stumbling blocks to agreement may appear if the chief present obstacles are overcome.

The negotiations last spring came a-cropper on Yugoslav demands that Austria cede certain portions of Carinthia and Styria and pay 150 millions in reparations. Since then the rift between Belgrade and the Kremlin has occurred, and the Russians may no longer be inclined to support the Yugoslav claims. Since then, also, Moscow has launched its wordy "peace offensive." The London negotiations may show whether Soviet professions of desire to settle outstanding issues go deeper than propaganda offered through newspaper interviews. The meeting of deputies is the proper sort of channel of accommodation to which Mr. Acheson referred the other day.

If the Russians change their tune on the Yugoslavian requisitions, the principal remaining problems will probably be Danube shipping and "German assets" in Austria. The Potsdam Agreement allowed the Soviet Union to include the latter, without further definition, in its reparations from Germany. As interpreted by the Kremlin, "German assets" turned out to cover a great deal of originally Austrian property which the Nazis had forcibly expropriated. Previous progress toward a compromise payment to settle this point, coupled with Austrian pressure to be rid of the occupation, indicates a possible settlement here.

But the matter of Danube shipping is more ticklish since the Russian demand for control is couched in such terms as to infringe permanently on Austrian sovereignty—a sovereignty that all the Allies have already agreed to restore. This is where the real test of the occupying powers' desire to get out of Austria will come. The Russians, having consolidated their hold on Hungary and Romania, probably no longer need the excuse of maintaining communications with Vienna to keep troops in those countries. But while Austria is firmly imbedded in the western grouping of nations and has relatively few Communists, the Western members of the Big Four cannot afford to blink the dangers of a Soviet bridgehead on the Danube. Soviet unwillingness to abide in every respect by the promise of Austrian independence as given in the Moscow Declaration in 1943 may yet prevent the safe withdrawal of the occupation.

Pie For The Veterans

Although reform of the House Rules Committee was eminently necessary, the absence of restraints increases the possibility that hare-brained legislation may reach the floor. This is the case with Representative John Rankin's scheme to pay pensions to all World War I and II veterans at age 60. Mr. Rankin proposes to give veterans $60 a month at age 60 and $90 a month at age 65, and in addition to compensate them for disabilities not incurred in service.

If the Veterans Committee reports the bill favorably—a foregone conclusion—Mr. Rankin will have the right to demand that the bill be called up for a vote, irrespective of what the Rules Committee does with it. And a vote on such a measure would be highly embarrassing to many legislators who personally see the fallacy in such unprecedented largesse. Politically speaking, the temptation will be not to vote "against the veteran," and one can only hope that there will be enough independent-minded members of Congress to resist this facile bandwagon psychology.

The political dilemma into which Mr. Rankin is forcing his confreres is amplified by pressure from the veterans' organizations. Only one of the major groups, the American Veterans Committee, has had the courage to oppose both a bonus and the pension; the others have spoken boldly for even more elaborate grabs. Yet the Veterans' Administration estimates the cost of the old-age features of Mr. Rankin's proposal alone at $1,839,000,000 the first year and five to six billion dollars annually by 1985. Another authority figures the total cost of the scheme over a 70-year period at the staggering sum of 198 billion dollars—well over half the direct financial outlay in World War II itself!

There is no question of the Nation's obligation to take care of the veterans disabled by the war, as well as the widows and families of the men who gave their lives. But this is already provided for. In addition, Congress, in the GI Bill of Rights, sought to compensate all veterans in some measure for the years they spent away from their careers—sometimes without thought for the adequacy of facilities. There is neither need for nor sense in the present proposal. It would place a stultifying strain on the economy, and veterans have a basic interest in a stable economy, for they prosper when the country prospers. Indeed, Mr. Rankin's "gift" encompassing some 18 million veterans would mean that the veterans would be paying a substantial share of the cost themselves! Even more fundamentally, the Rankin scheme is an attempt to compensate veterans, not for injuries, but merely for doing their duty—a duty that fell to all physically fit Americans. Real patriotism admits of no such reward.

Hiss In 1948

The 1948 report of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace shows the impact of a new hand at the helm. The hand is that of Mr. Alger Hiss, new president-on-leave. Mr. Hiss reports that the most important service the endowment can do is to support the United Nations, "the one body in the world today designed to prevent war and to offer a substitute for it."

As bearing not on Mr. Hiss' veracity about what he did in 1938, but on what he was thinking and doing in 1948, the following paragraph from his report is worth quotation:

> While much of the work of the endowment throughout the past year has been in support of the United Nations, it has kept constantly in touch with all those policies and proposals of our Government which are designed to strengthen peace, and it has loyally supported those policies not by advocating measures of appeasement which betray our fundamental rights and our concepts of the rights of the individual but by seeking solutions through which those rights may be safeguarded without resort to war.

ONE SCATTERED DREAM

Let all dreams be scattered. Let all
Dreamers be quiet in their stalls.

Silence is law. We must obey . . .
Forget our arid thoughts of day

To the lily petals white
Scattered earthward in the night.

So blindly in the wind and rain
With ear to earth and troubled brain,

We listen in the fragile shell
To seas recede and the seas swell;

And treading fiercely in delight,
Face upward to the starry night,

Our wild hearts cry from pain for ease,
Till we are scattered dreams in seas.

"Inherent" Authority

I read with interest the statement of President Truman that the Attorney General had advised him that the President had "inherent" authority to halt strikes which imperil the national health or welfare.

The Constitution specifically confers upon the Chief Executive the power, as well as the duty, to enforce the law, and where there is an absence of law, there is an absence of power. Under the Constitution, the President is without any judicial or quasi judicial authority or power whatever.

No man or set of men should be permitted to imperil the national welfare. No harm is done by permitting the President the proper authority, by law, even if he has "inherent" authority, which he has not.

Settlement With Russia

In your issue of February 3, Walter Lippmann quotes Mr. Bohlen, counselor of the State Department, as having said: "While the deep cleavage . . . is not susceptible of being bridged by the magic of an agreement . . . this does not mean that the practical, unresolved questions of the postwar world may not be progressively settled." Mr. Lippmann goes on to state that Mr. Bohlen seemed to be saying that "there is no use of making agreements, but that practical questions can be progressively settled by agreements."

Of course, Mr. Bohlen did not say that settlements would come by agreements. He said that there would be progressive settlement without any formal agreement. For example, the very definite problem of Communist domination in France and Italy has virtually been contained and settled without agreement with the U. S. S. R. Similarly, so may the problem of Northern Greece be settled, and eventually possibly the problem of Trieste, and so may many other problems be progressively settled without formal agreement.

Mr. Lippmann has noted the difference in the record of Soviet agreements, pointing out that political agreements were often broken, while those relating to the boundaries of the Soviet Army have not been broken. That is just the point—the Soviets have not attempted overt military expansion with the Red Army. Their expansion beyond the Yalta boundaries has been achieved through the political and revolutionary arm of the Communst Party.

I think Mr. Bohlen means that a progressive settlement without agreement can be achieved until the boundaries of the Red Army are reached. At that point, perhaps Mr. Bohlen feels that the men in the Kremlin will believe that a definite settlement based on agreement is desirable. ARTHUR M. COX.

"Communist Trial"

In your editorial, "Communist Trial," of February 2, you seem to be on the verge of seeing the Communists as I have always seen them—as saboteurs of the American system and all of the institutions through which that system functions, as well as destroyers of the very concepts of the relationship of man to God and man which gave birth to the American system and its institutions.

It has seemed to me that the tactics of the Communists before the court in New York do not differ in any respect from their tactics in every case in which they have been called to account before an agency of the American Government. I have been particularly impressed by the similarity of the conduct of the New York Communists to the conduct of the Communists before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

I am convinced that the Communists are pursuing precisely the same purposes before the court in New York that they pursued before the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and that those purposes are being made manifest by precisely the same sort of tactics. The conduct of "a coolly judicious examination of the nature of the Communist assault upon our free institutions," was no more possible for the House Committee on un-American Activities than it has been for the court. But, to the credit of the committee, I say that it did a better job of defending our free institutions against the assault of the Communists than the court has done.

Cold Shoulder

As a non-Communist, I recommend to the attention of those who have eyes to see and brains to reason, the latest example of President Truman's giving Stalin's outstretched hand the deliberate cold shoulder.

I hope this opens the eyes of the people to the obvious fact that so far from desiring to effect peaceful relations with Russia, the men who control this country want war and are industriously promoting it.

For the past few years everything bad which Russia has done has been hugely headlined; while the good things she has done have been accorded mocking skepticism by the population-influencing press. A. D.

"Reliving History"

Many of your readers are confused by your editorial statement that "on power and leadership Mr. Churchill is entitled to be ex cathedra." We had supposed from what we read in the papers that he had been ex cathedra, and that Mr. Attlee had been in cathedra, since midsummer of 1945. It may be that in ecclesiastical terminology, with which I am unfamiliar, to be out of the chair means the same thing as to speak from the chair. But the average layman, the world over, will be glad that Mr. Churchill was not out of the chair in 1940 and 1941.

ELMER DAVIS.
Washington.

Editor's Note: If we had said "in power and leadership," Mr. Davis would have a point. Anyway, "speak ex cathedra" is better, and "speak with authority," better still. On the particular issue that Mr. Churchill writes about, he is not only in the chair, but at the head of the table.

Taxi Meters

In a radio interview February 3, Lieutenant Hefferman, the District of Columbia hack inspector, proposed that taxi meters be installed in cabs to remedy some of the many inequities arising under present D. C. cab zoning regulations.

In my opinion, taxi meters are definitely not the answer to the taxi dilemma whereby cab drivers are forced to operate under a price squeeze in many areas and consequently do not provide adequate service.

The remedy to the present situation, in my opinion, is to narrow down the zone areas and to eliminate group riding rates. Passenger should pay individual rates instead of group rates. If the present zones did not cover such large areas and passengers paid individual rates most of the present inequities would be eliminated.

Another measure for improving the taxi situation in the District of Columbia which was not mentioned by Lieutenant Hefferman, is to limit the number of cabs in Washington.

"Columbia Valley"

Your editorial of January 27 on the Columbia Valley is a discerning and balanced appraisal of the need for a unified and comprehensive porgram of regional development. However, your reference to "a pronounced distrust of Federal control" and "the ingraine fears of Government domination," said to characterize the Pacific Northwest, may convey a somewhat erroneous impression to your readers.

The people of the Pacific Northwest, by and large, recognize and accept the fact of Federal responsibility for promoting the conservation and development of natural resources in the great Columbia River basin. This is more than a matter of the reclamation and flood control benefits suggested in your editorial. Thus the Bonneville and Grand Coulee plants now supply more than half the power consumed in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

A vast network of transmission lines owned and operated by the Federal Government through the Bonneville Power Administration carries this power to load centers. To meet the acute and chronic shortage of electrical power in the area, other Federal dams and transmission lines are under construction or in various stages of planning. It is contemplated that by 1957 there will be 20 Federal dams instead of two on the Columbia River system, doubling the present Federal output of electricity. Even then, four-fifths of the Columbia River system potential will await development.

Recognizing that the economic future of the Pacific Northwest is bound up with Federally-produced power and a comprehensive resource development program, most people in the region are interested in a more efficient way of getting the job done. Their concern for maximum local participation in the proposed Federal program for the Columbia Valley is a healthy one. It accords with our democratic tradition and reflects a desire to bring government closer to the people.

This kind of concern must be carefully distinguished from the narrow self-interest which plays up local opposition to delay or defeat Federal legislation beneficial to the region as a whole. Also, some of our local newspaper editors, I regret to say, are far behind the thinking of the people in regard to a Columbia Valley Authority. It is improper to infer from ultraconservative and unrepresentative editorial opinion "a pronounced distrust of Federal control" on the part of people generally in the Northwest.

Psychological War Germs

"Doctor" Of Nations

AT LAST a man has been given an award of $5000, not because he discovered a vaccine or a star, invented a gadget or a weapon, painted a picture or wrote a novel, but because he has pioneered in trying to do something about the mass mental sickness that lies back of war.

Dr. John Rawlings Rees, noted British psychiatrist and president of the new World Federation for Mental Health, is the man. His award came from the International Committee for Mental Health.

Dr. Rees spent the early part of his life studying how to help individuals get along with each other. The Second World War, in which he was chief consulting psychiatrist for th British Army, drove home to him the need of diagnosing and treating the mental illnesses of groups and of nations. He saw nationalism run riot and become a disease with the Nazis. In editing the volume, The Case of Rudolph Hess, he realized to what an extent Nazi leaders became off balance.

He also saw nuclear physicists paving the way for atom bombs, chemists preparing for biological warfare, but nothing being done about the group suspicions, fears and hatreds that were threatening to initiate fresh war. He saw legislators willing to appropriate money to train physicists, chemists and weapon makers but getting suspicious and tightfisted at suggestion of any social science research designed to prevent war.

BECAUSE of all this, Dr. Rees, with other leading men in his field, organized the International Congress of Mental Health which met last summer in London. Out of this was born the World Federation he heads, which has consultative status with the United Nations.

Doubters may ask: What does Dr. Rees propose to do about nations, parties, other groups in "emotional diapers" (as Dr. Edward S. Strecker has put it) when even individuals in that state are still a baffling problem?

Dr. Rees, good physician that he is, offers no quick cure-all, but would proceed along the traditional lines of diagnosis and a search for the cause. He would have widespread study of the emotional attitudes of groups and communities. He would try to find out what tensions, insecurities, frustations, lie at the bottom of mass running amok. Once the nature of group stresses and conflicts was determined, a remedy could be sought.

For such diagnosis more men trained in group psychology and in psychiatry are needed. Psychiatrists up to now have devoted their attention largely to individuals. While such study is basic, Dr. Rees would have them extend their medical interest to groups.

BUT SOCIAL scientists are not entirely without some "prescriptions" for shaping the world mind toward emotional maturity and peace. The last war provided psychiatrists with much knowledge of group behavior. For example, it was found that men with a democratic tradition behind them were not likely to change their attitudes because of propaganda. The best results came from free group discussion.

It was also found that the best leadership developed when the followers helped choose it. In the British army the "sociometric choice," by which soldiers selected from their comrades those to be sent on as candidates for officers, furnished better leaders than those chosen by officer selection boards.

Nations and groups suffer from many of the same ills as individuals. Both are hampered in achieving world citizenship by limited and parochial outlooks—and accompanying inflexibility, suspicion and fear. Insecurity in nations as in persons leads to emphasis on status, which in turn develops aggressive attitudes.

More cooperation of all social scientists, including sociologists and anthropologists, is urgently needed to build mental health and world citizenship in nations, Dr. Rees believes. He also thinks governments and world official bodies need awakening to the realization that the problems of peace are not just political and economic, but at least half psychological.

'Mongrelization'

In one of his speeches, in opposition to President Truman's civil rights program, Senator Eastland of Mississippi made the astonishing statement that if the rights bill is passed the white race in the South will become mongrelized.

There are many persons who to all appearances are white with blue eyes and blond hair, but because it is thought they have Negro blood in their veins they are classified as Negro.

In Senator Eastland's home State the percentage of white Negroes is higher than in any of the other Southern States; surely if he is not blind he can see that it is the Negro race that has become mongrelized. The intermingling of the races began when the first few Africans were brought here in chains over 300 years ago and has continued with an accelerated tempo until the present day. It is the estimate of our foremost sociologists that there are five million white Negroes in the United States. Upward of 30,000 of these Negroes cross the color line annually. Who is white and who is Negro?

Trade Unions, Russian Style

ALMOST without notice from the press one of the last links between the Soviet Union and the West was severed not long ago.

Childs

On the day that the British Trades Union Congress, the CIO and the Dutch unions pulled out of the World Federation of Trade Unions, an era came to an end.

Documents that have just reached here show that the step was inevitable. Russia was determined to use the WFTU as an instrument for thwarting the reconstruction of western Europe and attacking the Marshall Plan.

From the beginning, James B. Carey, for the CIO, and the British TUC delegates had taken the stand that the Marshall Plan was in line with the declared policy of the World Federation to support the reconstruction of war-devastated countries. But time after time, in spite of their repeated protests, they had seen the WFTU used to propagandize against "monopoly capitalism" and the Marshall Plan.

Therefore, at the recent Paris meeting the British, the American and the Dutch delegations withdrew. In a stirring speech Carey denounced the Russians for perverting what had been intended to be a world organization of labor unions into a device to further Soviet aims.

The reply came from V. V. Kuznetsov, president of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions in Moscow. The shrill indignation directed at Carey and the British delegates, Arthur Deakin and Vincent Tewson, showed plainly that Kuznetsov was on the defensive.

ᔓ

"CAREY SAYS that the Soviet trade unions are subordinated to the Soviet state and the Cominform," Kuznetsov shouted. "This is a sheer lie.

"The Soviet trade unions are an important and influential organization in Soviet society, but the government has never been in command of the trade unions. In our country government authority belongs to the working people. The Soviet government is glad to help the trade unions and duly considers their opinions . . .

"Carey does not like it because there are no strikes in the U. S. S. R. Yes, there are no strikes in the U. S. S. R. and not because they are prohibited by law, for on the contrary our law permits strikes. But there are no strikes. Why? Because we have no exploitation—and Carey should finally understand this . . ."

The trade unions in Russia are, of course, completely subordinate to the all-dominant state. This has been obvious for a long time to all but the blindest fellow travelers.

ᔓ

THE CIO has been criticized for staying in the WFTU when it became apparent that Communists dominated its operation. But Carey, long a foe of Communist aggression and Communist tactics at home and abroad, went ahead with the backing of CIO President Philip Murray in the hope that through a world labor organization a common meeting ground with the Russians could be found.

Last March Carey flew to Moscow to make a direct appeal to Kuznetsov to end Communist sniping in the WFTU. In a dramatic meeting Carey warned that if the WFTU failed and the Soviet unions and the CIO could not get along together, then it would be generally agreed in the United States that nobody there could get along with the Russians.

He pointed out to Kuznetsov how the CIO had helped to shape the Marshall Plan, participating in its work at every stage. Kuznetsov's reply was to repeat all the old charges of American imperialism.

The partnership between Carey, who looks much younger than his 37 years, and Murray has brought significant results. Murray, who still has a burr in his speech from his native Scotland, is now having a brief rest cure in Mercy Hospital in his home town, Pittsburgh.

While Murray has been working with Carey on the international front, being in frequent telephonic conversation with TUC executives in London, he has at the same time been warring against Communist influence in the CIO. The past year has seen Communist intriguers removed from virtually all posts of influence in the CIO and its affiliates.

It can be argued that they never should have been allowed to rise to positions of influence. But that is history and so now is the quiet revolution that has thrown them out.

Applause for Dewey . . .

Dewey Urges GOP to Face Fact It Is 'Split Wide Open'

open for years, but we have tried to gloss it over. We have tried to deny it to ourselves and conceal it. That doesn't work. I suggest that we face it, get it right out in the open and look at it. Then, let's see what we can do about it."

Where was the party to go? Without using the phrase, he appeared to favor a middle-of-the road course. If it tried to go back to the 1920's, he said, it would be "the deadest pigeon in the country." If it tried to outpromise and outspend the Democrats, he said that would be a betrayal of both party and country.

Anyway, Dewey said, it was useless for the Republicans to outpromise the Democrats because the Democrats would "promise anything to get a vote."

He offered no new program, but called for support of that laid down in the '48 platform.

The ballroom of the Mayflower was jammed for the Lincoln Day rally, and all elements of the party were on hand—conservatives, liberals and moderates. Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, a rival of Dewey for the GOP nomination, called on the New Yorker in advance of the dinner, and then went back to Capitol Hill for the labor-bill hearings. Mrs. Martha Taft remained for the breast of capon on Kentucky ham and the oratory.

To judge from the applause, most of the Republicans in attendance were moderates.

Governor Dewey was applauded when he attacked those who wanted to turn the clock back and also when he went after those who wanted to embrace the entire New Deal and go beyond it.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, who preceded Dewey, surprised many with her criticism of the Republican - dominated Eightieth Congress. She said the Republicans were put in control in 1946 because the people did not like strikes and price controls. Once in power on the Hill, she said, the GOP missed the boat by "do-nothingism," by trying to take a backward step to "the good old days," and by bowing to pressure groups as the Democrats had done before them.

Mrs. Smith was applauded.

Representative Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, Republican leader of the House and Speaker in the Eightieth Congress, defended that Congress as "one of the best in our history." He recalled its tax-reduction bill and evoked applause when he added:

"I predict tonight that, if the present Administration is not checked in its runaway spending plans, the tax reduction bill passed by your Republican Eightieth Congress will go down in history as the last tax reduction bill ever passed by Congress in the twentieth century."

Mrs. Jane E. Hunter of Cleve-Phyllis Wheatley Foundation spoke for the Nation's Negroes. In introducing her, Representative Thruston Ballard Morton of Kentucky, who presided, conceded that the GOP had lost a large segment of the Negro vote.

Governor Dewey, standing in the glare of kleig lights, delighted the gathering with his opening, good-humored remarks. He said that at one time last year, he thought he would be coming to Washington for a longer stay. But now, he observed, his relationship with the city would continue, as in the past, "to be merely that of an occasional visitor."

A burst of laughter greeted his next remark, which concerned the repair work now going on at the White House:

"Recent events have made it clear that no Republican President was going to live at 1600 Pennsylvania ave. anyway. No Democratic President is living there either. The White House has been in Democratic hands so long that, like the Government itself, it's falling apart."

Well along in his speech, he drew applause in an attack on the "incompetence" of the Truman Administration in dealing with the Chinese crisis. As a result of it, he said, the fruits of American victory in World War II had been turned to "bitter ashes."

He was applauded, too, when he urged that Republicans welcome young people into its fold and make their party "the party of youth."

It was Governor Dewey's first major political speech since he went down to defeat before President Truman last November. Mr. Truman, who remarked after the election that Dewey was his greatest asset, will have a chance to reply when he speaks at a Jackson-Jefferson Day dinner here on February 24.

Governor Dewey, in describing the two extremes of thought in the GOP, first mentioned those Republicans who honestly oppose farm price supports, unemployment insurance, old age benefits, slum clearance and other such reforms.

"These people," he said, "consider these programs horrendous departures into paternalism and would actually repeal them all. These people believe in a laissez-faire society and look back wistfully to the miscalled 'good old days' of the nineteenth century.

"They also take the position that the sole duty of an opposition party is opposition. They urge Republicans in and out of Congress to fight every proposal of a Democratic Administration, regardless of its merits.

"At the other extreme are those in the party who seem to embrace the entire New Deal and want to go far beyond it as rapidly as possible at almost any cost and regardless of consequences.

"Personally, I disagree with both extremes. The fact that I disagree is not so important, but what is important is that both courses are fatal to our party and would be fatal to the country. If, as a party we try to go back to the nineteenth century, or even to the 1920s, you can bury the Republican Party as the deadest pigeon in the country.

"On the other hand, we can't out-promise the Democrats. If we tried to outbid the Democrats with public money, it would be wrong, immoral and a betrayal of our party and our country. Moreover, you couldn't out-promise the Democrats if you tried because they will promise anything to anybody to get a vote.

"What we ought to do is stop bellyaching about the past, . . . and start making it everlastingly clear to the country where we stand and why.

"In 1948, our platform was unanimously voted without one dissent at the national convention. It must mean something. Unless it was designed to deceive, its various sections say and mean that we are a liberal and progressive party.

"To be entirely specific, they say and mean that our party has solemnly declared that we believe wholeheartedly in unemployment insurance, in old-age assistance on an increased basis, in broader social security generally, in slum clearance and public housing, in public development of water power resources, in farm price supports, in vigorous protection of the rights of labor.

Matter of Fact

Tito And The West

BELGRADE.—There are important signs here that a new era will shortly open in Marshal Tito's foreign policy. Having broken irrevocably with the Kremlin, he cannot permanently remain in total isolation, suspended like Mahomet's coffin between the Soviet and Western world. And since he cannot return to his old friends in the East without literally imperiling his neck, it is logical that Marshal Tito should begin to think about making new friends in the West.

As long ago as last summer, leading Yugoslavs informed American and British officials that their country would need help to maintain its independence. But this was done almost conspiratorially, with many pleas that Washington and London should not "embarrass" Marshal Tito by showing open friendship. In the interval, it has been American and British policy to give Marshal Tito the minimum essentials to keep his country going. But now we may have an opportunity to abandon this hole-and-corner system and to establish businesslike, straightforward, genuinely friendly relations.

The wisest diplomacy will be needed, if the opportunity is to be successfully seized. In previous reports in this space, the flavor of a successful religious heresy in Yugoslavia's declaration of national independence has already been emphasized. And as with all bands of heretics, the Yugoslav leaders differ widely among themselves in the lengths they go in rejecting their former faith.

SPECIFICALLY, there are some, like the Vice Premier, Eduard Kardelj, and the chief state planner, Boris Kidric, who still believe the Kremlin propaganda about "American imperialism," even after their own casting out, with bell, book and candle, by the Kremlin's Cominform.

On the other hand, the majority of Yugoslav leaders, including Marshal Tito himself, his chief political theorist, Moshe Piade, his powerful Interior Minister, Aleksander Rankovic, and his foreign policy technician, Ales Bebler, appear to be far more realistic.

There have even been public indications that this realistically minded majority is abandoning the hostility toward the West which Yugoslavia originally adopted as a good Soviet satellite. For instance, Piade, in a recent speech, went out of his way to point out that Tito's Partisans had been recognized sooner and helped far more generously by America and Britain than by Russia. The realists must still carry along with them their more superstitious and suspicious brethren, however. In the face of the Kremlin's constant efforts to subvert Tito, Yugoslav unity must be maintained at all costs.

In these circumstances, American diplomacy has been indecisive to the point of neurotic incompetence. Our able Ambassador here, Cavendish Cannon, has done much to prepare for a new relationship, and above all to convince the Yugoslavs on the all-important point that we do not wish to interfere with their internal affairs. But what Cannon has done he has done on his own hook, without any clear policy instructions.

AGAIN, as when we released oil ships to Tito at Trieste, certain American aid has been extended to the Yugoslav state. But at the same time, America has been refusing many Yugoslav export licenses, and requiring Britain and other Marshall aid countries to do the same. This is being done on the rule applied to the still faithful Soviet satellites, that they cannot be permitted to buy equipment which may assist Russian rearmament. Yet a bullet sold to Yugoslavia today is only likely to find its way to Russia by being shot into a Russian's head. And in the present state of nervous suspicion in Belgrade, all Yugoslavs take these American refusals of export licenses as clear evidence of hostility.

If better relations with Yugoslavia are desired, the first step must be to clear the ground by halting this sort of fiddle-faddle. This will give political realists here their chance. Then, if Marshal Tito chooses to take this chance, genuinely close relations may be established. Existing political frictions, such as that arising from the situation on the Greek frontier, may be removed. And Yugoslavia may be offered the all-important means for building up her strength, improving her people's well-being, and giving solidity and permanence to her new independence.

If Yugoslavia is associated with the other nations that are united against Soviet aggression, it will be the worst blow to Kremlin policy since the Marshall Plan. An invaluable strategic outpost in the Balkans, protection for the Adriatic and insulation for an independent Greece, and important supplies of such scarce raw materials as lead will be the practical Yugoslav contributions.

Far more significant, however, will be another contribution—the impact of Marshal Tito's bold heresy of popular communism on the whole Soviet sphere, if Yugoslavia grows strong and prosperous in rebellious freedom. Tito is still a dictator. But all sides will benefit from a new relationship with him. And common interest still remains the best basis for international friendship.

Marshall Plan Is Succeeding, Acheson, Hoffman Testify

Hoffman said the recovery program has already greatly strengthened the forces of freedom in Europe but the "real proving period lies ahead . . . immediately ahead."

"Major Readjustments"

Europe, he said, must make "major readjustments which break away from its traditional and now inadequate ways of paying its way in the world."

He mentioned increased and more effective taxes, balanced budgets, balanced investment programs, more production per man-hour to increase exports, and scaling down of intra-Europe tariff barriers among the "tough decisions which must be made and carried out if Europe is to stand on its own feet."

He said it may well be that measures necessary to achieve economic recovery "will form the foundation of a far grander structure—the permanent close association of the free nations of Europe."

Following Hoffman on the stand, Acheson told how the recovery program had been launched as "a calculated risk" and said it was now proven "sound" in the first year of operation.

Difficulties Ahead

"Of course there are difficulties and problems ahead," said the Secretary of State. "But the outstanding fact which emerges . . . is that the program is succeeding.

"Every sound precept calls upon us to press that success. The worst of all courses would be to relax our efforts and allow the momentum of achievement to diminish."

To relax, Acheson said, would be "to lose all that has been gained, and to lose also the opportunity to bring the program to full completion."

The Secretary of State told the joint committees there has been "no advance in totalitarianism" on the European continent since the program began.

This may not have been solely due to the recovery program, he said, "but without it the situation probably would have been very different."

He noted that in every important election since ERP's inception "the people have more vigorously reaffirmed their adherence to the principles of individual freedom and governments based on constitutional retraints."

Acheson praised steps taken by France and Italy to meet "Communist-inspired attempts to defeat recovery and sabotage domestic production."

Labor Now on Alert

He said labor in the free countries has become increasingly aware of Communist aims and "has not permitted itself to be misled by foreign dictation into the sabotage of its own well being."

Commending the Brussels defense pact signed last year by five Western European nations, Acheson noted "definite advances in the field of collective security."

Progress toward closer political association will take time, he said, but spoke of "significant steps toward the eventual development of a closer political union."

Like Acheson, Harriman testified that "hope, and the will to resist tyranny," which were ebbing in Europe in 1947," are flowing again today."

"It is this which has arrested the spread of reactionary Communist aggression," Harriman said.

"Without this revival, the Communists might well have succeeded in their design to get control of Italy, which was frustrated in the elections of April 1948; nor could the Communists have been kept out of the government of France."

Harriman said Russia perceived the constructive potentialities of the Marshall Plan earlier and more fully than many others, and used these three weapons to combat it:

"The systematic creation of the fear of war, the systematic penetration of the labor unions of western Europe . . . and the systematic misrepresentation of American motives through incessant propaganda, both open and concealed."

He said Russia "regards the fear of war as an instrument to be used in the course of its scheme of moral and psychological disruption. The fear of war tends to kill hope for the future and with it initiative, enterprise and investment, all essential to the recovery of Europe."

As evidence that "pressures are beginning to reverse" he cited Yugoslavia's break from Moscow domination and "dissention within the ranks of the Communists in other satellites."

He referred to the sentencing of Cardinal Mindszenty to life imprisonment and said:

"In spite of the tragic events in Hungary today, the spread of tyranny has been arrested."

New Military Law Code Asked

ment for more or less common offenses that developed during the war and were not adequately covered by existing law. They include:

(1) "Misconduct as a prisoner"—This would subject to punishment American POWs who curry favor with enemy camp authorities or do other acts "detrimental to other prisoners." The same offense would punish POWs put in positions of authority who mistreat other prisoners. In several cases of this sort tried since the war end, the law has been found inadequate.

(2) "Missing movement"—This would subject to court martial a Navy man who deliberately misses his ship when it sails on a war cruise or a soldier who similarly is left behind when his unit is shipped overseas. There were many cases of men trying to evade combat this way who could only be punished for reporting back late from leave.

(3) General tightening of laws to combat black-market activity, particularly the sale of PX cigarettes and issue clothing.

Drops Archaic Language

The proposed new code was drafted by a committee named by Forrestal last August. It was headed by Prof. Edmund M. Morgan of Harvard Law School, and composed of Undersecretary of the Navy W. John Kenney, Assistant Army Secretary Gordon Gray, and Assistant Air Force Secretary Eugene M. Zuckert. Felix E. Larkin, assistant general general counsel of the Office of Defense, was executive chairman of the group.

The code drops the archaic language and hodge-podge arrangement of existing law and follows our modern civil codes in outline and format. It would liberalize present court-martial procedure as follows:

1. Require that both the "trial counsel" — prosecutor — and defense counsel in general courts-martial must be qualified lawyers.

2. Provide for a "law officer" for each general court martial case. He must be a lawyer and would act as a sort of a trial judge, passing on legal points, but not vote as a member of the court on the facts and verdict.

3. Establish a new system of review, involving a board of review within each service, composed of qualified lawyers, to pass on the creditability of witnesses and weigh the evidence.

New Orleans Buys Roy Weatherly

New Orleans, Feb. 8 (AP).—Outfielder Roy "Stormy" Weatherly is coming back to New Orleans, which was his last stop en route to the Majors 12 years ago.

General Manager Vince Rizzo of the local Pelicans of the Southern Association announced today Weatherly had been purchased from Indianapolis of the American Association, where he hit .303 in 68 games last season.

Food Prices Plunge Again

March delivery for 31.05 cents a pound. Support price is 30.75 cents.

Cocoa trading also was marked by extreme drops.

Several steps were started during the day to halt the steadily falling prices, including:

1. The Agriculture Department announced a support price for butter of 59 cents a pound until September 1. After that date the price will go up to 62 cents. Chicago wholesale butter prices have been hovering around 62 cents a pound this week, 2 cents under a week ago and 22 cents under a year ago.

2. The Senate Agriculture Committee started a hearing on the use of Marshall Plan funds by Great Britain for the purchase of Canadian wheat. Ralph S. Trigg, production and marketing administrator of the Agriculture Department, testified that this country already is exporting all the grain that it can move. Shipments abroad up to December 31, he said, was 1.3 long tons short of the goal that had been set last fall.

Railroads' Net Estimated 42% Higher in Year

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net income of Class One railroads increased 42.6 per cent last year, despite a slump in December.

The Association of American Railroads yesterday estimated that the 127 Class One roads netted 711 million dollars in 1948, against 498 million in 1947. December net of the same group was reported at 58 million dollars, compared with 76 million in the final 1947 month.

The roads showed an average return of 4.38 per cent on net property investment last year, against 3.46 per cent in 1947.

Gross operating revenues were $9,671,576,262, an increase of 11.3 per cent over 1947. Operating expenses of $7,471,554,087 were 9.9 per cent heavier.

The AAR report noted that, notwithstanding the general improvement in income, 22 Class One railroads failed to earn interest and rental charges in 1948. Nine of these were in the Eastern district, nine in the Western and four in the South.

Class One carriers are those doing one million dollars or more gross business annually.

The company noted that 1948 earnings are subject to an appropriation of $125,000 as a reserve for possible future inventory losses. A similar reserve of $50,000 was made in 1947.

Privately financed construction reached $124,154,000.

Premium Gold Sale Approved by Fund

The International Monetary Fund said yesterday it has approved a sale of alloy gold at a premium price on condition that precautions be taken to make sure the metal is used only for industrial or professional purposes.

The transaction involves the sale in London of 100,000 (troy) ounces of South African gold of 22 carats at $38.20 an ounce. Pure gold is 24-carat.

The price in the London transaction is equal to a premium of about $6.50 a fine ounce over the fund's $35 price for pure gold.

The Union of South Africa, whose government is making the sale, is a member of the 50-nation Monetary Fund.

Officials in Washington, where the $35 is recognized by the Treasury, watched the development with some concern—especially the reaction of other large gold-producing countries such as Canada and Mexico.

The fund discourages departures from the fixed price because of the tendency in "soft money" countries, such as France and England, for persons to put their capital into jewelry diamonds, or gold products as a hedge against inflation. This creates further money problems for nations already suffering inflationary pressures.

A fund spokesman said the Union of South Africa desired to pass on the price premium to gold producers, as a stimulant to lagging output.

The fund does not attempt to regulate gold for industrial or artistic use, even though it is impossible to detect how much of such semi-processed gold goes into hoards instead of the intended use.

Patterson Will Fight Settlement Due Today

Settlement of the five-month fight over the will of the late Eleanor M. Patterson is scheduled to be enacted in District Court today.

Barring unforeseen developments, attorneys on both sides of the multimillion-dollar dispute said they expect a court-directed verdict to admit the will to probate and end litigation which began September 13, when Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, daughter of Mrs. Patterson, challenged the will.

Terms to Be Disclosed

Terms of the out-of-court settlement, which was suddenly announced January 28, will be disclosed after the court acts, attorneys for Mrs. Gizycka and attorneys for the executors said yesterday.

All interested parties are expected to be present at 10 a. m. today before District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff.

Witnesses to the will and its two accompanying codicils will testify, and unless there is some unexpected action, attorneys said, the court will go through the formality of presenting the will to a jury impaneled for that purpose, direct the jury to "prove" the will and certify the will's executors.

The estate of Mrs. Patterson, late owner-publisher of the Washington Times-Herald, has been variously estimated at $16,586,571 and $17,690,000.

Daughter's Charges

Mrs. Gizycka had charged that it was not her mother's last will, and that it was executed through fraud and duress while her mother was of unsound mind. The jury will have to find the will valid on all these points.

As drawn, the will gives Mrs. Gizycka $25,000 a year for life and certain property, but her attorneys claimed that taxes actually would cut into the estate to such an extent as probably to prevent her from receiving any money.

On January 30 The Washington Post published a report from an informant stating that the settlement agreement provided for Mrs. Gizycka to receive a lump sum payment of between $400,000 and $500,000 in lieu of the $25,000 a year.

More Personal Property

It also is believed likely that the settlement gives Mrs. Gizycka more of her mother's personal property than she would receive under the will. Among Mrs. Patterson's possessions were many valuable furnishings and other items which would be distributed to others under the will.

Some of this property is in the mansion at 15 Dupont Circle, which Mrs. Patterson willed to the Red Cross with the building. Red Cross officials, however, denied yesterday that they have entered into any agreement concerning their bequest.

Other property is in the Dower House, at Upper Marlboro, where Mrs. Patterson died. The Dower House was willed to Mrs. Ann Bowie Smith, a neighbor of Mrs. Patterson.

One on the Aisle—

Loretta Threads A Mystery Maze

By Richard L. Coe

POOR LORETTA YOUNG has as fiendish a time as any heroine of the year in the Warner's "The Accused," a superior mystery yarn that should keep you mesmerized until the final, equivocal fade-out.

Loretta's dilemma is like one of those pebbles you toss in the water; before it's over everyone's affected by her tragedy, so much so that Paramount hasn't the heart to give you the jury's decision.

Loretta plays one of those brainy female psychiatrists. Dr. Young isn't a consulting room expert, though. She plies her trade in a sunny California classroom, and while she's a bit repressed, wearing mannish suits and a straight hair-do, she seems to be getting along okay.

But one of her students, an attractive, cynical lad, takes more than a scholarly interest in her and lures her out to look at the sea from Malibu. Here, Douglas Dick, who plays this fellow, takes manly advantage, an attention Loretta strongly resents with a blunt instrument. She dumps his body over the cliff, sneaks back to her lonely apartment and does what she can to quell her goose pimples.

As if this isn't tough enough, next morning she meets Dick's guardian, a youngish lawyer embodied in Robert Cumming's well-respected charm. Love the man? Natch. Gradually Bob cottons on to Loretta's ghastly secret and has the sad fate of watching the police close in with a sound case against Loretta. Not even the fact that the detective also has been alive to Loretta's hitherto undiscovered allure can save her from facing the law.

Neatly Arranged Ending

The ending to all this is so neatly arranged that Lawyer Cummings and Producers Paramount must be congratulated for hewing it out. It's always against my policy to give away the ending of one of these what's-going-to-happen-to-the-killer tricks, but by remembering Frank R. Stockton's "The Lady or the Tiger," Script Writer Ketti Frings has done us all a favor. My wife and I can find totally different fates for Loretta, and I've no doubt everyone will be satisfied.

With the advantage of a reasonably unusual story, Miss Frings has whacked out a script that's engrossing most of the way. William Dieterle's direction keeps things spinning and he's got a fine cast of principals.

Miss Young's unhappy prof. is a natty study of a lady trying to keep her nerve. You'll enjoy Dick as the insolent student, though Gordon Jennings' special photography sure 'nuff makes his eyes dilate. Cummings and Corey, as the men trying to solve the maze, are thoroughly capable, and Sam Jaffe, who's been away too long, has a nice spot as a frizzy guy with an enquiring mind. Washington's Mickey Knox is on tap as an amorous truck driver, and all told Paramount has done well by June Truesdell's novel.

TODAY'S — and tomorrow's — Washingon visitor is Forrest Tucker who spent a good part of his school days here before going on to his present rough and ready Hollywood roles . . . Tucker checks into the Carlton to be on top for tomorrow's opening of "The Plunderers," at the Metropolitan . . . For opening day only he'll lug his 6 feet 4 onto the Met stage at all shows for a howdy with his old neighbors.

"THE ACCUSED." Paramount release produced by Hal Wallis. Screen play by Ketti Frings from a novel by June Truesdell. Photography by Milton Krasner and Gordon Jennings. Music by Victor Young. Directed by William Dieterle. At the Warner.

ANOTHER VISITOR is from France, Ninon Tallon, who talked yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Andre Visson to the Washington Chapter of the National Society of Arts and Letters, which last year awarded $14,000 in scholarships for music and painting; this year the group hopes to branch out into other fields. . . . Today Mme. Tallon will be talking with friends from 4 until 6 at the home of Col. and Mrs. William Waller Edwards.

JOSEPH BERCHOLZ, producer of most of the late Raimu's films, is coming on from Paris especially for Friday night's benefit opening at the Playhouse of "Symphonie Pastorale." . . . He arrives today on the Queen Mary and will be meeting some of the Gotham critics who called his production of the Andre Gide story the year's finest foreign language film. . . . Friday night's premiere at the Playhouse is for the National Symphony Orchestra sustaining fund.

Postlude

Ballet Russe Performance Is a Sell-Out

By Paul Hume

Ballet came back to Washington last night, with its bright costumes, favorite scores, and stars of yesterday, today, and tomorrow.

The Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo braved Constitution Hall again. It must be their least favorite spot for dancing in the entire country. Lighting is inadequate, stage facilities are nonexistent, and the lack of scenery is nearly fatal at times. What a spot for the Nation's Capital to see ballet and opera!

Still, there are absolutely no seats left for tonight or tomorrow, and none for two following nights in Baltimore.

Last night's opener was a vastly humorous venture. Resuscitated after sleeping nearly a century, it is called "Pas de quatre," or dance for four.

Last season the Ballet Russe brought it out in New York with no less than Danilova, Markova, Slavenska, and Krassovska to carry on the traditions of their noted forerunners.

Each leading lady is given a solo dance. They parade around the stage in usual formations, smiling and being polite to one another, when you know perfectly well they would much rather slit their arch rivals' throats. Last night's cast held Danilova, Krassovska, Boris, and Tyven. But it is a moment requiring greater dancing than most quartets possess today.

Chief opus of the night was the Seventh Symphony, taking its name directly from the Beethoven score which accompanies it. Massie's choreography is weakest in the first movement, most affecting in the second. The third is purely traditional ballet gayety, and the last the usual victory of divine destruction over man's sinful ways. Except for the second movement, the dancing seemed routine. A number of mishaps were due to the fact that it always takes a ballet company at least one night to realize what a horrible place they are dancing in.

The evening concluded with one of the great favorites of all ballet: The Blue Danube, with Danilova in one of her unique roles, the Street Dancer, and Frederic Franklin keepink her company in his usual stalwart fashion. Sorry no more seats.

Hearing to Discuss School Board Elections

Election of Montgomery County school board members on a nonpartisan basis will be discussed today at a public hearing before the House Judiciary Committee in Annapolis.

Chairman Anders R. Loftstrand, jr., of the Montgomery County delegation, said the hearing would be held in the State House after the House of Delegates adjourns its afternoon session about 3 p. m.

The bill would provide for election of school board members instead of the present method of selection, appointment by the Governor.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

NOW IT IS TED WILLIAMS who is heard from in the frenzied dollar derby for the honor of taking down baseball's biggest salary. And it is with nice timing, what with Joe DiMaggio established this week as a $90,000 wage slave on the Yankees' payroll.

Williams is keying his demands to DiMaggio's salary and with refreshing bluntness, a characteristic he never lacked, the Red Sox slugger is saying, "If DiMag gets $90,000, I'm worth more. I'm a bigger drawing card than DiMaggio."

POVICH

It all sounds a mite immodest of Williams, but he was never the one to hide his light, and it may be difficult to disprove that he is a bigger drawing card than DiMag. His boast has more than a ring of truth.

DiMaggio give the fans their baseball straight. What they get from Williams is a kind of cocktail, with plenty of body, a dash of temper, some bitters and a wallop that exceeds the neat DiMaggio potion. The customers either like or hate Williams, but on both counts they pay their way in, in big numbers.

WILLIAMS' CLAIM that he is worth more than DiMaggio can be debated, of course. But he is of unchallenged value at the box-office, thanks to both his batting skill and his color. That last asset, in Williams' case, can hardly be called showmanship. He's a born extrovert, an exhibitionist, and is colorful without trying.

Besides that, he goes along outhitting DiMaggio most every year, and by wide margins. Since Williams came along, DiMaggio has never won an American League batting title. Ted led the league in 1941-42, and after three years in the service he came back to blow the title to Mickey Vernon in 1946. But for the last two seasons nobody has been close to him.

DiMaggio called last season one of his greatest years, and it was. He held the Yankees together, batted in 155 runs and had a whale of a season. But look at the record, as Williams suggests. He outhit DiMaggio's .320 by 49 points and drove in 129 runs in 16 fewer games than the Yankee slugger. Thus there is some logic to Williams' opinion of his superior worth in the salary scale.

BREAKING IT DOWN in another way, though, Williams' comparative value to the Red Sox, gauged against DiMaggio's importance to the Yankees' success, is somewhat suspect. Whereas the Yankees were almost completely dependent on DiMaggio's heroics, the Red Sox demonstrated they could operate nicely without Williams. It was during his absence from the lineup that they achieved their 13-game winning streak last summer.

Williams' pay was in excess of DiMaggio's last year. The Red Sox ace was in the $75,000 bracket compared to the estimated $70,000 of DiMaggio, and it is understandable that Williams should wonder why he should not rate more than DiMag in the salary department this year. His .369 batting average is in cold type, and his employer, Mr. Tom Yawkey, is no less a millionaire than the Yanks' owners.

On the road, Williams packs 'em in even more than DiMaggio, but there is a great discrepancy in the home attendance. That, however, isn't Williams' fault. The Boston park can seat only 34,000 fans compared to the 70,000 the Yankees can accommodate on a big day. The Red Sox front office can't quite cash in on a big series to the degree the Yankees can.

FOR YEARS in the DiMaggio-Williams debates it has been fashionable to point out that Williams' value to the Red Sox's competitive success ended with his hitting. That was, of course, in contrast to DiMaggio's importance to the Yankees, for DiMag for most of those years rated as the best fielding and best throwing outfielder in the American League. And he was faster on the bases than Williams, more ambitious.

But the years have brought Williams and DiMaggio closer together in the fielding, throwing and base running departments, while DiMag has been unable to close the batting gap. It's been obvious to the fans that DiMaggio has slowed in the outfield and his arm is no longer the feared weapon of his prewar career.

In contrast, Williams is an improved ballplayer. Rid of Joe Cronin, to whom he never cottoned, Williams went all-out last season under Joe McCarthy. He smartened up in the outfield, though he is not to be rated with DiMaggio there, and he was more eager on the bases. For the first time, he acted as if the game demanded more than an ability to hit the ball.

Feller Signs, Veeck Says Pay Cut Is 'Substantial'

Cleveland, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Bobby Feller of the World Champion Cleveland Indians had to take the first pay cut of his illustrious career today, but he remained the highest paid pitcher in the history of baseball.

He settled for a contract which will net him approximately $67,000 on an attendance bonus arrangement or about $15,000 less than the $82,000 he made last season.

His base pay remains the same—$40,000—but he will get less on the bonus. Unlike last season there is a ceiling on the attendance clause so even if the Indians draw more fans than they did in 1948 Feller cannot make as much.

One Year Contract

Feller, whose pride in his personal accomplishment amounts almost to fanaticism, forced a grin when he came out of the conference room with President Bill Veeck.

He flew here in his own private plane from New York and was about half an hour late for the 4 p. m. conference. He met with Veeck for about half an hour before the signing was announced.

Veeck was asked whether Feller took a large pay cut. His answer, "Yest, a substanial one."

Then he was asked if Feller will still make the most money on the team. His answer: "How's the weather out today."

Shortstop-Manager Lou Boudreau signed a couple of weeks ago on a straight pay contract for two years. His salary is estimated from $65,000 to $75,000 a year.

"It was a one year contract and under it Feller will definitely not make as much as he did a year ago," Veeck said. "We both compromised since our last meeting on January 26."

"Yeah, I took a cut but I still think it is a nice contract," Feller said, a trifle glumly. "And, well, I signed it, didn't I?"

Jackie Robinson Gets Reported $20,000

Brooklyn, Feb. 8 (AP).—Jackie Robinson, Negro second baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers, said today he signed up for 1949 at a "substantial increase" over last year when he reputedly got $15,000.

"I am very happy over the terms," he declared. Presumably the terms were in the neighborhood of $20,000.

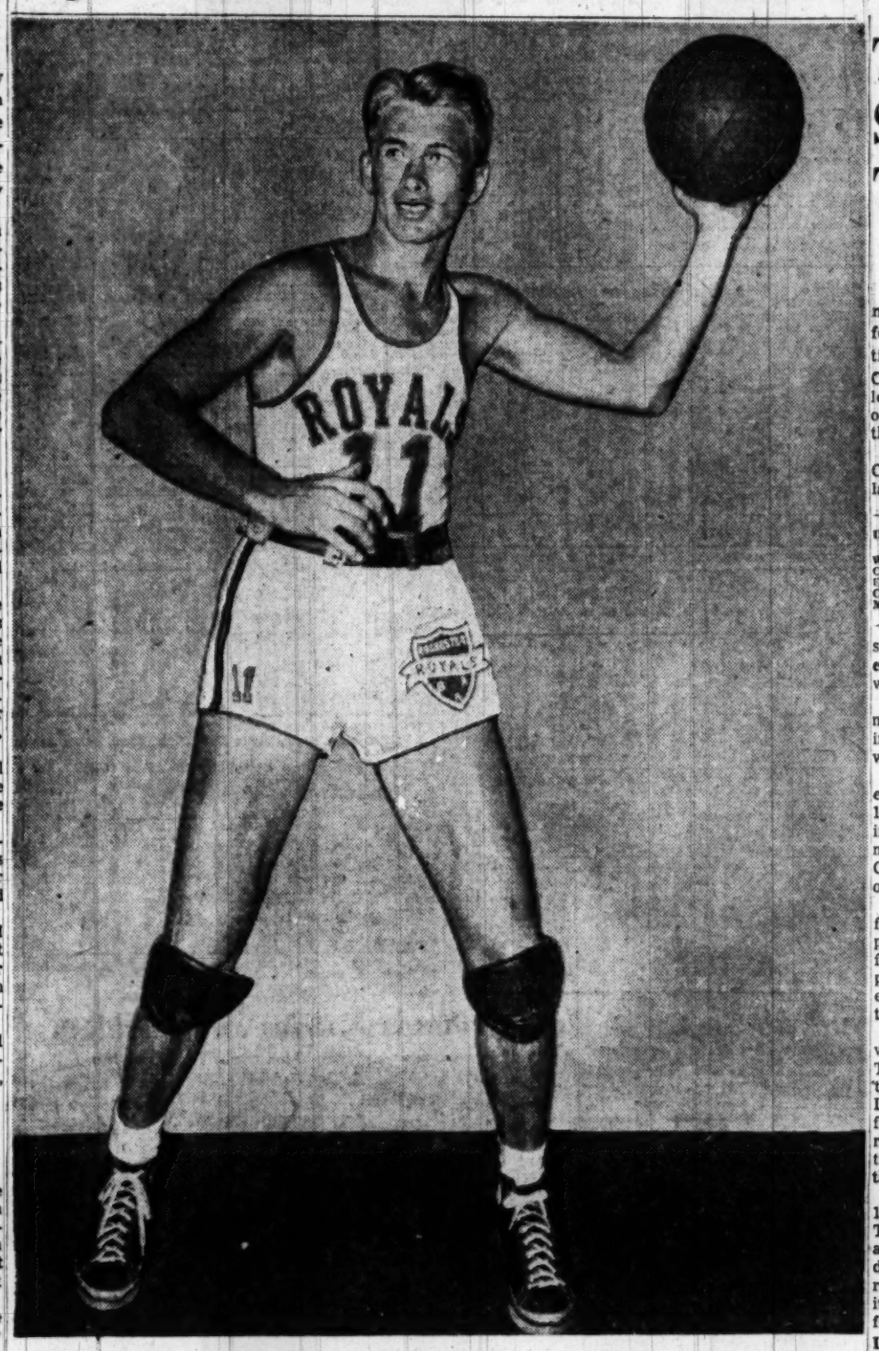
Robinson, who came to camp last year weighing 220 pounds and was slow rounding into shape, said he now weighs 206 "and I won't have any trouble getting down to 195."

Shotten, for 51st Time, Says 'Bums Are In'

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—With Boss Branch Rickey nodding his head in agreement, a beaming Burt Shotton went way out on the limb today and predicted that his Brooklyn Dodgers would win the National League pennant this year.

"I've already said it 50 times since the campaign closed that Brooklyn would win the pennant in '49," Shotton said. "It won't hurt to say it for the 51st time.

Coolidge Wins in Last 30 Seconds Of Overtime; Wilson Beats Western



ONE OF ROYALS' BEST—Bob Davies, 6-foot-1, 185-pound forward, will be one of the stars in the Rochester Royals' line-up tonight against Washington's Caps at Uline Arena. Davies is a former Seton Hall player of several All-America selections. Tonight's game will bring together the leading teams of the East and West divisions of the Basketball Association

Two Foul Shots Top Tech, 47-45

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

A one-eyed guard with steel nerve and unerring aim sank a foul goal with 10 seconds of overtime left, and gave Coolidge's Colts a 47-45 victory over McKinley Tech yesterday in the nightcap of an Interhigh doubleheader at the Armory.

Kenny Luxenberg, 5 foot 7-inch Colt captain, is the stout-hearted lad who toed the line with the shouts of 1000 schoolmates in his ears, and calmly popped in the winning point.

INTERHIGH BASKETBALL STANDINGS

	W	L	Pct.		W	L	Pct.
Wilson	7	0	1.000	Western	2	4	.333
Coolidge	5	1	.833	Roosevelt	2	4	.333
Eastern	4	1	.800	Anacostia	2	5	.286
Central	5	2	.714	Ch'berlain	1	6	.143
McKinley	4	3	.571	Bell	0	6	.000

Setting the stage for the dramatic second game, Wilson's leading Tigers opened the program with a 47-44 win over Western.

Sharing the hero role with Luxenberg is Bob Langrall, a 6 foot 1-inch reserve center, who proved indispensable in the closing moments of the game when Regulars Carl Hevener and Don Eslin fouled out.

With only 12 seconds of the fourth quarter left, and Tech in possession of a seemingly comfortable three-point lead, Langrall projected himself into the Trainers' deep freeze, and raced half the court to shoot.

As Langrall went up to let go with the ball, he was fouled by Tech's Ray Fox. The ball went through the nets anyway, and Langrall took his position at the foul line. Waiting for the crowd's roar to simmer down, he arched the tying foul goal in, and sent the contest into overtime, 44-all.

In that 3-minute extra period, 12 fouls were committed, eight by Tech. Langrall gave Coolidge an advantage after 2½ when he dropped in a free toss. Bert Lawrence made good his chance to tie it by scoring from the foul line for Tech with 25 seconds left.

Luxenberg Wins

Then with 10 seconds remaining, Franny Frain's anxiety got the better of him, he fouled Luxenberg, and Ken dropped in the winning point. As the final gun went off, Denny Hevener scored another point for the Colts, but it was superfluous.

In the course of that hectic nightcapper, the score was tied eight times, and the lead changed hands 13 times. The win gave Coolidge sole possession of second place with a 5-1 record. The loss was the third in seven games for fifth place Tech.

Tech managed to keep in the game on hot scoring spurts by Bob Curtis, Tony Sgro and Billy Werber. Curtis scored seven in the first period, and wound up with nine. Sgro notched 14 in the second quarter, and wound up with 18. Werber's 10 in the last period almost sewed it up for the Trainers.

However, the Colts were a better team, working the ball smoothly, and dividing the scoring among Don Eslin, Denny Hevener, Luxenberg, and Langrall, each with nine points.

Wilson's win in the first game merely served to strengthen its already clinched playoff position. The Tigers led all the way, a 11-6, 25-19, and 39-28 at the quarter marks, but had to turn back a late Western threat to win.

Still Looking

Louie's Alone Since 'Skins Got a Coach

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Louie Basile still needs a coach.

He and the Redskins were in the same predicament last week, but the Redskins got out by signing up Rear Admiral John E. Whelchel, USN.

So far Louie's team doesn't even have a name. It doesn't have a backer, either, or a place to play. It's just a gang of 42 guys out in northeast Washington with a desire to play football.

Louie thinks a coach is the first requisite. And Louie isn't demanding too much of his coach.

He doesn't have to be an admiral, Louie says . . . "Just an older fella able to handle the guys."

He doesn't need a reputation. Louie wants a man with some experience, but he isn't looking for "the greatest thing ever to happen to sandlot football."

There'll be no interference with the coach Louie signs, he insists . . . "I'm a steamfitter myself," Louie says, "and my only interest in this is to get the team going. I'll be strictly a player when I find a coach to take over."

Among Louie's players are several former University of Maryland regulars and a lot of former schoolboy stars. If a coach can be found in time the team will undergo spring training, then next fall try for a berth in one of the local unlimited leagues.

Terms of the contract to be offered Louie's coach were not divulged, but Louie made one announcement to candidates.

Terps Whip South Carolina Easily, 79-49

The University of Maryland set a new College Park scoring record last night with a 79-49 rout of the University of South Carolina.

It was the fifth Southern Conference win for the Terps and the fifth loss for the Gamecocks. Lee Brawley, a tall Terp from Arizona, led the Marylanders with 25 points and was benched with 5 minutes remaining. For the visitors, Henry Martin was high with 14.

The Carolinians first hit for a field goal after 7 minutes and 45 seconds of the first half. The Old Liners already had 13 points by that time.

Maryland led 33-22 at the half.

For the Stewartmen, it was the sixth win out of 19 games played this season. The win keeps them in the running for a Southern Conference tournament berth with a record of five victories against four defeats. Their next opponent will be North Carolina this Friday at College Park.

Low Handicap Bowlers Get Behind Post Event

The low handicap bowlers, who usually shy away from handicap competition, have hopped on The Washington Post tournament bandwagon.

They have pledged a 100 per cent entry for the big event, which will be held in cooperation with the Metropolitan Washington Duckpin Bowling Operators' Association, February 14-March 1, inclusive, for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club.

Johnny Parise, secretary of the Men's Major District League, which comprises the cream of this area's duckpin talent, and the Men's Minor District, which rates right behind the majors, announced that he would enlist the support of the eight teams in the two leagues.

Ruth DiMisa, secretary of the Capitol Ladies' Major League, announced that she would enroll every player on the eight league teams.

Hokie Smith, manager of King Pin Alleys, plans to rally the National Capital City League, While Doc Gartell, Columbia manager, is steaming up interest for a 100 per cent turnout in the 23-team Merchants League, one of the largest in Washington.

Meanwhile Mrs. Joseph Arnold, president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Police Boys Club, conferred yesterday with her committee. She plans to announce tomorrow the bowling alleys where the women will be placed to obtain entries from the league bowlers.

Entrance fee in the tourney is 50 cents with one-half going to the Police Boys Club to aid in the campaign for $250,000 and the other half to the prize fund. First prize for men is $100, for women $50. Scratch for men is 128 and for women 118. Each entrant must bowl in league competition to be eligible for prize money, and only league games will count.

GW Takes on Duke in Armory Clash

George Washington meets Duke tonight in an important Southern Conference basketball game at the Armory with a modest enough aim.

The hot and cold Colonials hope this time they'll stay hot enough to put together a two-game winning streak, something they haven't had since they whipped VPI and Richmond in succession early in December.

Loyola of Baltimore, unbeaten in seven Mason-Dixon Conference games and featuring high-scoring Jim Lacy, meets Abe Rosenfield's Catholic U. quintet 8:30 p.m. at Brookland.

Georgetown travels to Philadelphia to face the University of Pennsylvania and Navy entertains a Villanova team that was dropped from the unbeaten ranks on its recent rocky Midwestern trip.

Since December 16, GW has won a game then lost one in a fashion that has become monotonous indeed to Coach George (Jug) Garber. Actually, it's GW's turn to lose tonight but Garber trusts his boys will stay at the peak displayed Monday night in crushing South Carolina, 81-51.

In that game, the Colonials dropped 17 of their first 28 shots from the floor for a phenomenal 60 per cent average.

Duke's record makes it difficult to even guess at the outcome of tonight's contest. The Blue Devils have been almost as much an in-and-out club as GW.

In its last three games, Duke walloped the Navy team that beat GW; overwhelmed NYU, 73-44, and then took a pasting from North Carolina, 64-34. And GW trounced Carolina at Chapel Hill, 64-41.

Where to Buy College Tickets

Tickets for the Duke-George Washington game at the Armory tonight, starting at 8:45, may be purchased at the G. W. athletic offices and at the Armory tomorrow.

For the season's final collegiate double-header Saturday, involving G. W. and North Carolina and Seton Hall and Georgetown, tickets may be obtained at either of the local schools or at The Fairway, 1328 G st. nw.

Armed Returns to Racing at Hialeah

Calumet Ace Back After Year's Rest

Miami, Fla., Feb. 8 (AP).—A comeback effort by Armed, Calumet Farm's famed "Golden Gelding", overshadows Hialeah's $10,000 Seminole Handicap tomorrow, scheduled headliner of the mid-week program.

Armed, once the world's top-money winning race horse, will end nearly a year's rest when he races against a field of seven in a six-furlong overnight sprint.

It will mark the gelding's first outing since the $50,000 Widener Handicap at Hialeah last February 21 when the Calumet veteran and King Ranch's Assault were pitted in what was heralded as a championship match. Armed beat Assault, but finished fourth. The race was won by a virtual unknown, Daniel Lamont's El Mono.

The Seminole, a 7-furlong dash, will be contested by eight candidates including top weighted Delegate from the Woolford Farm Stables. Delegate, winner of the Hialeah Inaugural and third in the $10,000 Palm Beach Handicap, has been assigned 125 pounds in the event.

In 63 starts, armed has won 36, placed 14 times and run third 5 times for a total of third high earning with $773,700. Stymie leads in money earned with $911,000 and Armed's stablemate, Citation, is second with $865,000.

Cabbie Case Is Going to Fay

gation, Police Chief Barrett on Thursday stated he thought two members of his force, the detectives who had been suddenly transferred—were "guilty as hell but I've got to prove it."

Barrett said he thought one of the two policemen had persuaded the victim not to identify them as the assailants.

Rowell failed to identify the two policemen at a special lineup Saturday. Barrett has since refused to explain whether he still thinks the two policemen guilty.

Since the three-week-old case was uncovered a week and a half ago, Rowell has claimed he could not give details as to identity of the assailants. He has denied he ever thought they were policemen. He said he thought the attackers were out-of-town men because their car was dusty and had clothes in the back.

Barrett relieved the policemen he named of vice squad assignments shortly after the beating, but made no announcement of the change at the time. He returned one policeman to his original assignment in the robbery squad and sent the other back to uniformed duty.

If Barrett thinks the facts warrant, he can take any of the following actions:

Order the pair tried by a police trial board. The board could recommend dismissal, demotions, fines or clear the men.

Summarily dismiss one of the two policemen who is a probationary rookie patrolman.

Demote the other officer, a detective sergeant, to unifomed private.

The district attorney could recommend court trial of the policemen on assault charges, if he or a grand jury thought circumstances warranted.

New light was thrown on the case Monday when a reporter for The Washington Post learned that an injured man resembling Rowell had applied for treatment at Emergency Hospital January 14 and said he thought his attackers had been policemen.

Miss Mary Marra, an Emergency Hospital nurse, said a man she thought was Rowell applied for treatment sometime between 4:30 a. m. and 5 a. m.

When requested to give particulars as to how he was injured the man asked if such information would be seen by police, Miss Marra said. When she told him it would, "he said he thought he was beaten by two policemen but he didn't want to involve any policemen, because he didn't want to get mixed up with police."

According to Miss Marra, the man then said he would go to a private physician, and left the emergency room.

Rowell has told reporters the beating incident began when he paused on his way into the drug store at Thomas Circle to watch two men slapping a third man.

When he came out of the drug store, Rowell said, he was accused by the two men of having phoned Second Precinct police. Rowell said he was then beaten, forced into a car by the two men, driven around the block, and let out.

Denials Made By Edwards

six-day trial that Edwards took the witness stand.

The first time several days ago, Edwards testified only about a confession police said he made to them regarding the crimes last September.

The defense has been concentrating on its contention that Edwards couldn't possibly have committed the crime as stated in the confession.

And the defense strove to show that that version of the bloody events the night of the killings dovetailed too neatly with what it asserted were preconceived police theories.

Character witneses for the defendant were heard today, including a Johns Hopkins psychiatrist who described Edwards as a man of "pleasant attitude and a friendly person, apparently eager to keep out of trouble."

The witness, Dr. O. R. Langworthy, was prevented by prosecution objections from giving an opinion as to whether the accused was of a type likely to perpetrate a double slaying.

Another defense witness gave testimony contradicting the State's theory on how Miss Kline died.

Dr. William D. Vandergrift, pathologist at the Fort Howard Veterans Hospital, testified that a wound and not a hemorrhage after a blow must have produced the quantity of blood in the back of Mahlan's car.

The State and Edwards' disputed confession contend the girl was stunned at the spot where her escort was shot through the head, but that she was shot in the clearing where the car was found and not in the car.

Okla. Bill Asks Non-Communist Oath in Schools

Oklahoma City, Feb. 8 (AP).—By a vote of 102 to 7 the Oklahoma House of Representatives passed a bill late yesterday demanding a non-Communist oath from all school teachers and college students in State supported schools.

It now goes to the Senate. The bill was offered by Representative Walter Bailey (D.), Vinita.

During debate before final roll call there were reports that hired Communists are enrolled as students at the University of Oklahoma.

Several legislators told of Communist activity on the campus at Norman.

One of them, Representative Edgar Boatman, Okmulgee, said he personally knew an out-of-State student who came to the University of Oklahoma "carrying a Communist card and a pistol in his pocket."

A vocal minority challenged the bill as "asinine" and "meaningless."

County Debt Limit Bill Is Introduced

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8.—A bill seeking to raise Montgomery County's bonded debt limit from 7 to 10 per cent was introduced in the House of Delegates today.

The measure, sponsored by the county's all-Republican legislative delegation, was requested last week by the Montgomery County Council, which was elected under the county's new "home rule" charter.

House Speaker C. Ferdinand Sybert (D., Howard County) referred the bill, which would, in effect, allow the county to issue approximately 11 million dollars more in bonds, to the House Ways and Means Committee.

Prepare Referendum Bill

Meanwhile, Prince Georges County legislators disclosed they were preparing a bill that would authorize a May referendum in Hyattsville on issuance of $100,000 in bonds to construct a new fire department building in West Hyattsville.

Other proposed Hyattsville measures received by the delegation, the delegates said, would increase from 8 to 13 cents the city fire tax, authorize the mayor and council to make street improvements without consent of 51 per cent of abutting property owners, and repeal a law requiring a 10-year referendum on operation of public utilities.

Three proposed Mount Rainier bills also have been presented to the Prince Georges delegation.

They would authorize an additional 5-cent fire tax for five years, increase salaries of the mayor from $200 to $1200 and councilmen from $125 to $600 annually, and authorize extension of the town's boundaries to include the Queenstown Apartment project.

A decision to reject a proposed bill, requested by Hyattsville businessmen, which would allow a referendum on the issue of parking meters, was announced by the Prince Georges delegation.

Members pointed out that voters could resolve the issue in the May municipal election by supporting, or rejecting, councilmen who favor or oppose the meters.

Mrs. Leona M. Rush (R., Montgomery) today announced her opposition to a request by county veteran groups for legal authority to sell alcoholic beverages in their clubs.

Mrs. Rush said she did not object to the proposal on moral grounds and expressed a belief that veterans would not "abuse" the privilege if it were granted.

Her opposition is based, she said, on fears that such legislation would "open the door" to other groups that would "abuse" liquor sales.

Montgomery delegates tonight held a public hearing on four proposed Takoma Park bills. They would require use of voting machines in town elections, eliminate the post of town assessor, eliminate tax discounts and require both Montgomery and Prince Georges to certify lists of eligible voters in Takoma Park.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8.—Legality of Maryland counties using State credit for school construction bonds is being studied by the Maryland attorney general, Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., said today.

The move, first advanced by county commissioners throughout the State, would enable counties already up to their safe borrowing capacity to borrow additional money for urgently needed new classrooms, using the State's good credit rating.

The county commissioners also are seeking quadrupling of the so-called incentive fund, which guarantees State funds in proportion to amounts levied on county tax rates.

Dr. Thomas G. Pullen, State superintendent of schools, has joined with the commissioners in requesting quadrupling of the incentive fund.

New President Of Evening Star

SAMUEL H. KAUFFMANN.

The Evening Star Newspaper Co. announced yesterday the election of Samuel Hay Kauffmann, 50, as president, and the election of four other officers and two new directors.

Kauffmann, namesake and grandson of the company's first president, has been with the paper 28 years, in nearly every branch of its business and mechanical departments, and has been vice president and treasurer for the past year. As president he succeeds Fleming Newbold, who died nine days ago.

The other newly elected officers and directors are third and fourth generation descendants of the men who organized the present Star company 80 years ago. They are:

Rudolph Max Kauffman, 66, vice president, a cousin of the new president and secretary of the company since 1927, who joined the paper upon graduating from Princeton in 1905.

Newbold Noyes, jr., 30, secretary; a Star reporter since 1941, a company director since last April, and son of the late Newbold Noyes, former associate editor.

Crosby N. Boyd, 46, treasurer, and also promoted from assistant business manager to business manager. Joining the Star cashier's staff in 1931, he has worked in the business and mechanical departments, was formerly assistant advertising manager and has been a director since 1935.

Rudolph Kauffmann 2d, 34, assistant secretary-treasurer, former reporter, now on the news copy desk, Navy veteran and a company director, 12 years with the paper.

The new directors are Godfrey Kauffmann, 31, advertising manager and brother of Rudolph, Army veteran, formerly assistant to the circulation manager, with the Star since 1939, and Crosby S. Noyes, 27, a brother of Newbold, reporter, former Air Force pilot and youngest director in the paper's history.

Divorce Bill Passes House In Maryland

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8.—A bill adding to Maryland laws a new ground for divorce was passed by the House of Delegates today and sent to the Senate. An expected battle on the measure which previously precipitated a bitter floor fight failed to materialize as it passed by a 65 to 46 vote.

The bill, if approved, would make it grounds for divorce if a spouse serves 18 months of a three-year prison term.

In other legislative developments in the General Assembly today:

1. Senator Edward D. Storm (D., Frederick) introduced his county "home rule" bill. The bill would enable Maryland counties to exercise greater power in purely local matters.

2. Resolutions from 165 organizations from over the State urging passage of a 100-million-dollar bonus proposal for World War II veterans were given the Senate by Senator Robert B. Kimble (R., Alleghany), sponsor of the bill.

One opponent of the divorce bill today was Delegate Thomas F. Dempsey (D., Baltimore), who previously led opposition forces.

After opposing the bill earlier on moral grounds, Dempsey today limited his remarks to predictions that the proposed law will undo rehabilitation efforts of penal officials.

Dud As a Papa

Prize Bull Put to Death

Des Moines, Feb. 8 (AP).—A $38,000 prize bull was put to death today because he couldn't become a papa. As a paternal dud, T. Royal Rupert brought $230.

Rupert

The blue-blooded animal, owned by Gov. Roy Turner of Oklahoma, had remained unresponsive to five years of treatments designed to enable him to produce little prize bulls.

High hopes had been held for Rupert after a delicate pituitary transplant operation last fall. But although Rupert showed a lively romantic interest in the bovine gentle sex, he remained as sterile as ever.

Thus it was that the reluctant decision came to convert Rupert into Bologna, which was all he was good for.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

RFC Would Become Mere Bureau Under Hoover Reform Plan

RFC: The Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be put through the wringer if a Hoover Commission plan for it is adopted.

The agency, as it's now constituted, would be abolished, and its lending functions would be transferred to the Federal Reserve Board. Under Federal Reserve, FRC would be a bureau which would be organized and operated along the lines of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration.

RFC now makes business loans which private banks are unable to make for one reason or another. It has a staff to investigate, service, and collect the loans.

Under the proposal before the Hoover Commission, private banks would make the border-line loans, which would be insured by the Federal Reserve Board. It's the same principle used by Federal Housing to insure the private loans of homebuilders, and of the FDIC to insure bank savings.

Federal Reserve would fix policies for its banks to follow. It would tell them, for example, what types of loans it would and would not insure. The banks wouldn't be taking a chance when they made the loans, as Federal Reserve would use its insurance funds to pay off any defaults. Also, Federal Reserve would discount the loans in order to give the banks ready cash.

RFC has other activities which either would be liquidated or transferred to other agencies under the tentative Hoover plan.

PAY BILLS: Two more bills which would raise the salaries of all classified and postal employes by a flat $650 each are to be introduced by Representatives Miller (D., Calif.) and McCarthy (D., Minn.). Both legislators are members of the House Civil Service Committee, which considers pay problems.

NOTES: Cash awards for economy suggestions have been given to Myron D. Alber, Leslie V. Perry, and Cyril H. York of the Government Printing Office . . . Dr. Franz L. Alt has been appointed acting chief of the Bureau of Standards' computation laboratory . . . Chairman Murray of the House Civil Service Committee, is one in a million. He says he won't appoint a single resident from his district to the committee staff. Also, he will do his best to take the jobs out of politics and put them in the career service . . . Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, gave the President a personal message from General MacArthur. He recently returned from Japan, where he surveyed the civil service system.

NEWSLETTER: Please mail me the names and addresses of field Government workers you believe might be interested in the new Federal Employe Newsletter to be published by this newspaper. I'll see that they are sent sample copies. The first edition of the newsletter will be out next Tuesday and it will be published regularly every other week thereafter. Subscriptions at $8 a year are being accepted.

PAY HEARING: The House Civil Service Committee was told yesterday that there is no hope of adequate salaries for career employes unless Congress fixes higher salaries for Federal executives.

The warning came from Arthur S. Flemming, president of Ohio Wesleyan, who is a member of the Hoover Commission. Flemming hinted that a forthcoming report of the commission would urge a sweeping revision of the entire Federal salary structure.

He said that the Federal executives were the real "forgotten men" in Government. he pointed out that ever single group in Government had been given salary increases in recent years except the executives. The former Civil Service official said it was unfair to continue to penalize these officials.

Boths Chairman Murray and Representative Rees (R., Kans.) suggested it might be a good idea to postpone all action on pay bills until after the Government was reorganized. Rees said the officials would cling to their jobs if their salaries were raised and it would make reorganization more difficult.

Fleming took the opposite view. He said it would be much easier for the President to reorganize the Government if he could pay attractive salaries to people to do the tough job.

Rep. Miller (D., Calif.) went down the line for the worthy bill. He pointed out that many able young employes leave Government when they find themselves in a blind alley. "They have nothing to look forward to now," he said, "because the salary ceiling is too close to their heads." Fleming agreed with him.

Murray said another committee meeting would be held next week. He believes his committee will report out a scaled-down version of the executive pay bill. However, he made it plain that there was no objection to the provision which would give foreign service and classified District employes the $330 annual pay raise retroactive to last July.

Corporation Counsel Vernon West asked the committee to accept two amendments which appeared agreeable. They were: (1) that the District be relieved of paying overtime, holiday and night differential pay to its classified employes retroactive to last July 1, and (2) that the District be empowered to use funds not yet appropriated to meet the pay raise cost. West emphasized that District employes would be paid overtime, holiday, and night differential pay after the bill is approved.

Segregation Report on Schools Held Distorted

Citizens' Federation Asserts Complete Equality of Facilities Is Being Attained

"Complete equality" is "being attained" in Washington's segregated school system, the Federation of Citizens' Associations said in a report released yesterday.

Second of a series of replies to charges made in December by the National Commitee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital, the report, issued in the name of the federation by its executive board, stated:

"On the whole, the picture of segregated education in the city is viciously distorted" in the segregation study.

That study, said the federation report, ". . . will lead the uninformed to the conclusion that Negroes suffer an intolerable injustice which can be corrected only by nonsegregation . . .

Equal Facilities Favored

"Though the burden of the support of public schools falls heaviest on the white citizen, it is, nevertheless, essential that there be complete equality in school facilities on all levels. Despite claims to the contrary, we believe this is being attained under the present system."

The federation report also charged misstatements in the segregation study as to Washington's recreation facilities and Police Department.

From the fiscal year 1943, through 1948, stated the report, expenditures for recreation improvements here under the Lanham Act were $1,253,000, "of which Negro playgrounds received 41.5 per cent. Compare this with the less than one third Negro population. It cannot truthfully be said that Negro recreation is being neglected."

"It is argued that all this is directly attributable to segregation. To this we cannot agree."

Omission of Facts Charged

In the segregation study's section on schools, said the federation report, it omitted numerous facts, including:

That during the past year, 40 teaching positions have been transferred, on a "permanent loan" basis, from white to Negro use; that in the last budget 90 Negro teachers and no whites were requested by the board.

That the superintendent of schools holds biracial administrative staff meetings; biracial division, department, principals and assistant principals meetings; that teachers' salaries are equal for training and experience; courses of study are prepared and text books are recommended by biracial committees.

While the segregation study leaves the impression that Negroes get older, inferior buildings, the report stated, "such is not the case. . . . At present there are as many old schools occupied by whites as by Negroes."

The report noted that the study pointed out that 15 per cent of Negro children were getting part-time instruction, but did not mention white part-time schooling.

While the segregation study said the Park View playground was restricted to whites in a predominantly Negro area, yesterday's report said this playground was turned over to Negroes in August, 1948, three months before the segregation study was issued.

Bill Combines D. C. Civil Rights With Home Rule

Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) yesterday introduced a combined District home rule and civil rights bill drafted for him by the District Progressive Party.

Marcantonio declared the bill would give more home rule to the District than would other proposals in Congress, and would also set up a District fair employment practices commission with power to prohibit discrimination in the operation of any District government facilities.

He said it would end segregation and discrimination in District schools and parks.

The bill calls for an elected District council and elected school board.

John A. Butler, 60, of 6221 Clay st. ne., who was injured Monday night in an auto-taxi collision at 8th and E sts. ne., died yesterday at Casualty Hospital.

He was a passenger in the taxicab, driven by James F. Padgett, 61, of 906 Evarts st. ne., according to police.

Payton Davis, 28, of 706 7th st. ne., identified by police as operator of the automobile, has been charged with drunken driving, driving at an unreasonable rate of speed and failing to yield right of way to the taxicab. He will be held for the coroner, police said.

A passenger in the car with Davis was Herbert Nicholson, 26, of 339 8th st. ne., police reported.

All four men were treated at Casualty Hospital. Padgett was admitted for treatment of a broken left arm; Butler had suffered undetermined chest injuries, while Nicholson and Davis were treated for minor injuries and released.

Butler's death was the first nonpedestrian traffic fatality this year in the District.

Mrs. Connie Johnson, 38, 9920 Capitol View ave., Silver Spring, Md., was knocked unconscious by a hit-and-run motorist in front of her home as she was crossing the road to her mailbox about 7:30 last night.

Mrs. Johnson was taken to Suburban Hospital by the Kensington Rescue Squad. When she recovered consciousness she told police that the car was on the wrong side of the street and the fender knocked her to the ground. X-rays failed to show any broken bones but she remained in the hospital for treatment for back injuries.

Girl, 7, Still Unconscious After Fall

A 7-year-old Fairfax County girl who tumbled down a flight of steps at a county school remained unconscious and in critical condition yesterday at Arlington Hospital with a fractured skull.

She is Kathleen Hawes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Hawes, who live on U. S. Route 50, about 2 miles west of Pender, Va.

The accident occurred Monday when Kathleen was walking down the light wooden front steps at Floris Elementary School in Fairfax County, where she is a first grader.

Her father said yesterday "somebody must have pushed her."

School Principal Ferris B. Wafle said, however, she was descending the stairs by herself, although no one saw her fall. The girl was discovered by another child. She was taken to a Herndon, Va., doctor who sent her to the hospital.

Soldier-Driver Killed As Truck Overturns

Pfc. William E. Pennington, 20, of Parker, Fla., was killed instantly yesterday when a foam-equipped fire truck he was driving turned over and pinned him to the ground at Andrews Air Force Base.

Two other soldiers riding in the truck escaped injury. They were Corpl. Angelo C. Midolo, 22, of Jersey City, N. J., who was seated beside the driver, and Pfc. Delphin L. Azumbrada, 20, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was standing on the back step of the truck.

Pennington was making a 90-degree angle turn when the vehicle overturned, pinning him to the ground. Modolo climbed out unscathed while Azumbrada was thrown clear, unhurt.

French Gifts Unpacked for D. C. Display

A silver dish of breath-taking beauty, oil paintings, exquisite china, a plaque of Benjamin Franklin, souvenirs of Indo-China and Siam, tables, a doll and scores of other items of great intrinsic worth or sentimental value are among the gifts of the people of France to the District of Columbia.

The presents were among the half-carload in the French Merci Train unpacked from crates and boxes yesterday in the basement of the Woodward & Lothrop department store. They will go on display, probably late today, in three big windows at the 11th and G sts. nw. corner of the store.

A long, thin, double-locked box for "His Excellency The President of the United States of America" was sent to the White House. It will be opened by Secret Service men and shown to Mr. Truman today, press aides there said. There was no hint as to its contents.

The unpacking of the gifts was an official business directed by Miles W. Bell, chief property inspector of the District auditor's office; an assistant, Omar Kibler, and an aide, Florence Johnson. Each item was carefully recorded.

Fennell Backed For Judgeship

Aubrey B. Fennell yesterday won unanimous backing of the Senate District Committee to continue as an associate judge of Municipal Court for a 10-year term.

Judge Fennell's nomination was approved by the District Committee in an executive meeting after his record was warmly praised by leading Washington attorneys in a brief hearing.

The nomination now goes to the Senate floor, where confirmation is expected.

Rezoning Rejected by Chillum Unit

Name Is Changed To Lamond Heights; Other Associations In Busy Meetings

Chillum Castle Manor Citizens Association voted unanimously 200-strong last night against industrial rezoning proposals for that area, and changed its name to the Lamond Heights Citizens Association.

Most of the 200 who attended the meeing in the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, at New Hampshire ave. and Peabody st. ne., promised to repeat their protests at a Zoning Commission hearing in the District Building this morning, according to Howard F. Baxter, association president.

The hearing is on proposals to rezone certain second commercial and residential areas in that section to industrial. The association will petition the District Commissioners against any rezoning that would bring more warehouses to the section.

Directors of the $1,500,000 Masonic home attended the meeting and fully supported the resolutions adopted.

Change in the name of the association is designed to avoid confusion with the Chillum Heights Citizens Association. William Alewine, vice president, presided.

The association petitioned Capital Transit Co. to extend the K-4 bus line about three-fourths of a mile to the District Line.

Resolution on Schools

A resolution calling for abolition of the District's "dual school system" as a means of curtailing operating costs of the city's educational system, was adopted unanimously last night by the Midway Civic Association.

The resolution was prepared by Frank Reeves, Washington attorney and chairman of the group's civil rights committee. In other actions, the association, which met at Morgan School, California and Champlain sts. nw., favored a "more equitable formula" for Federal contributions to District revenue and for increasing the District liquor tax.

Favors D. C. Sales Tax

Kingman Park Civic Association last night went on record in favor of a District sales tax.

During its meeting in the Recreation Hall, 25th and Oklahoma ave. ne., the group also directed a letter to District Commissioners, protesting proposed erection of a private airport on Kingman Lake.

In other actions, the association commended Fireman J. L. Nelson for heroic action in saving a child from a burning building at 3768 Foote pl. ne., last Sunday.

Back Rent Measure

The group met at Randle Highlands School, 30th and R sts. se.

Other resolutions adopted included one putting the association on record favoring the proposed cross-town bus service from Bolling Field, along Alabama ave. to Fairfax Village and the District Line.

Thomas Circle Meeting

The Thomas Circle Citizens Association last night went on record against extension of rent controls, voted opposition to radios in buses and donated $5 to the March of Dimes campaign, F. M. Thompson, corresponding secretary and treasurer, reported.

The association met in the Thompson home at 1536 16th st. nw. Thompson's wife, Mrs. Ella M. Thompson, is association president.

Michigan Park

Plans for a shopping center on Sargent rd. between Dalafield pl. and Emerson st. ne., has been approved by the Michigan Citizens Association.

Meeting Monday night at Bunker Hill School, 14th st. and Michigan ave. ne., the group also went on record as opposed to any rerouting of Capital Transit Company's H-2 bus line.

In further action, the group asked officials to look into the condition of Sargent rd. nw., which it described as full of holes.

Summit Park Group

The Summit Park Citizens Association last night indorsed Daylight Saving Time and a sales tax for the District, at its meeting in the Anne Beers School, 36th s., and Alabama ave. se.

Fort Dupont Group

The Fort Dupont Citizens Association, meeting last night at the Ann Beers School, 36 pl. and Alabama ave. se., went on record in support of the District's current campaign against tuberculosis.

The group's nominating committee also posted the names of candidates for election at the annual election of officers at next month's meeting.

Way Cleared For Voting in Restaurants

Filing of non-Communist affidavits by officers of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Alliance with the National Labor Relations Board yesterday is expected to pave the way for union shop elections at two Washington restaurants, union officials said yesterday.

Elections are scheduled for Olmsted's, 1336 G st. nw., and Fan and Bill's, 1132 Connecticut ave. nw.

Hugo Ernst, president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders International, who is attending the American Federation of Labor convention in Miami, announced the filing of the affidavits through associates here. The alliance is the collective bargaining agency for Ernst's union and three others representing waiters and waitresses, hotel service employes and Local 209 of the Cooks, Pastry Cooks and Kitchen Helpers Union.

Filing of affidavits by the principal officers of the four unions comprising the alliance follows the suspension January 11 of William S. Johnson as business agent of Cooks Local 209 on charges he is a Communist Party officer. Ernst had ordered a hearing on the Johnson charges in December which, he said, uncovered "circumstantial evidence" that Johnson is vice chairman of the District Communist Party.

Union officials said yesterday Johnson has written Ernst requesting a transcript of testimony taken at the December hearing, indicating Johnson apparently plans to appeal his suspension to the general executive board of the international union, meeting in Miami February 14.

Indigent Aid Buys Drink, County Body Is Informed

Welfare Official Charges 'Misuse' of Charitable Funds In Prince Georges

Money given to persons on Prince Georges County welfare rolls has been "misused," a member of the County Welfare Board charged yesterday at a meeting of the county commissioners.

The member, C. Norris Hartman, told the commissioners many indigents were spending welfare funds for liquor instead of food, clothing and medicine.

This "misuse of funds," he declared, should be halted. He listed, without giving names, several cases in which grants of money were spent improperly.

"They take the money," Hartman said, and spend it for liquor."

Certificates Suggested

Hartman, who termed the practice "extensive," suggested that certificates be issued in lieu of cash, specifying certain sums to be spent for necessary items.

"We should cut out giving cash to welfare families," he said.

The commissioners, who will meet today with the State board of public welfare at Annapolis, were asked by Hartman to place his suggestion before the State officials.

The commissioners said they would look up the law on welfare expenditures before making a decision.

Miss E. Susan Hendrics, director of county welfare, declined to comment last night on Hartman's charges pending what she termed "careful study."

She said, however, she knew "of one or two outstanding cases," such as referred to by Hartman.

Miss Hendricks said she has a policy of taking indigent parents to juvenile court in cases where there is evidence of misused welfare grants.

"I'm doing it every week," she said.

Improvement District

A petition by property owners for creation of a special improvement district taking in Colebrooke, Hillcrest Heights, and Hillcrest Gardens was approved by the Commissioners.

Attorney Nicholas Orem, jr., representing 40 property owners, presented the petition. After the new district was approved, he said the next step would be to obtain the street improvements.

In other actions the board:

Took under study a petition asking grading, graveling and oiling of Walker Mill road from Addison Chapel road to Ritchie road.

Scheduled a hearing at 11 a.m. March 1 for residents of Dupont Heights, who will urge hard-surfacing of Porter st. and Campbells drive.

Slated another hearing at 11:30 a.m. the same day for residents of Carmody Hills for resurfacing of D st., between 74th and 76th sts.

Arthritis Funds Drive to Seek $25,000 for Area

The District of Columbia Chapter of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, 915 19th st. nw., yesterday announced a campaign to raise at least $25,000 to combat rheumatic diseases in Greater Washington.

The foundation, an organization of laymen and physicians, said the drive will begin February 15 and end March 14. It is sponsored by the group's board of directors.

Ward M. French, president of the D. C. chapter, said the campaign will provide a bed for arthritics at two of Washington's leading hospitals at a cost of about $5000 each; establish a fellowship for $3000 so that a physician may specialize in the field of arthritis, and utilize remaining funds for research and purchase of necesary equipment and supplies.

By Bill Gold
Post Reporter

Dorothy Kilmer can walk again.

With painstaking pride, she proved it yesterday—to celebrate her homecoming from the hospital late Monday.

When a bullet from a rookie policeman's pistol went crashing into her spine last July, Dorothy faced a lifetime of bedridden dependence on others.

But at Washington Sanitarium, Dr. R. A. Hare, superintendent, and Dr. Wayne McFarland, head of the department of physical medicine, began a long-range "selling" job.

They sold Dorothy on the idea that modern medical techniques plus resolute determination might some day free her from her wheel chair.

After three months, Dorothy stood up and, with the aid of crutches and braces, tried her first uncertain steps.

"I was afraid, and I had no confidence. But I tried it," Dorothy recalled last night. "Once I fell, and I was frightened. But I stayed with it, and now I can walk almost 50 yards. I did it twice, yesterday, to celebrate coming home. That's why I'm all tired out today."

It had been a long time since Dorothy was "back home" with her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Lester L. Kilmer, of 4606 13th st. nw.

She's going to rest, and "visit with Mom and Dad" for a few weeks, while Dr. McFarland notes her progress. Then, if all goes well, Dorothy will begin the second phase of her battle.

Through the intercession of the District of Columbia Rehabilitation Service, she has been cleared for admission to the Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center at Fishersville, Va., near Staunton. Reedy Corbett, supervisor of the Virginia State Vocational Rehabilitation Service, authorized Dorothy to enroll as a "student," because of the "severe condition of her case, and the unavailability of other facilities."

Mrs. Mary T. Stewart, social economist with the local rehabilitation office, said that Dorothy's acceptance by the Virginia institution initiated an informal agreement between the District and the State of Virginia, and that it was hoped that other local patients could be accommodated when the working arrangements between the two jurisdictions are formalized.

However, at the Woodrow Wilson center, they're not considered "patients." The word that's used is "students," and the accent is on self-help—teaching men and women (who in former years would have been bedridden) to care for themselves.

Modern physical therapy methods and rehabilitation services to a great extent grew out of World War I. The ending of World War II gave a tremendous impetus to the program.

At Fishersville, Dorothy will find not only the latest in physical therapy treatments, but a comprehensive course of training designed to enable handicapped students to walk without help, get in and out of bed alone, perform ordinary household chores, and even to negotiate tricky scatter rugs without tripping.

"It sounds wonderful," says Dorothy. "Mother went down with Mrs. Stewart and looked the place over, and she says they've got every kind of help I'll need. I'm anxious to get started, so that maybe—in a few more months. . ."

"If she keeps her chi up," adds Dr. McFarland, "she'll be okay. She's come a long way. But she still has a long way to go, and it's going to take plenty of work and determination on her part to see it through. It's a hard fight for anybody with Dorothy's handicap, but it's certainly worth it."

More than 2500 District Liners who contributed $5511.17 to help defray Dorothy's expenses get a special word of thanks from Dorothy's mother.

"After paying for treatments so far," said Mrs Kilmer, "we have $4284.89 left in the Dorothy Kilmer Fund. There is no way of estimating what will be needed for the remainder of the work, but for the present at least, the kindness of our neighbors has permitted us to give Dorothy every medical help available. Words can't express our sincere graditude."

Dorothy won't ever be able to get around without her braces and crutches. But she's feeling pretty chipper, now that she's home again—and resting up for the next round of her big fight.

Last December, Wayne W. Edmondson of 2210 Shannon pl. se. drew a 5-to-15-month suspended jail term on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. Judge Alexander Holtzoff lectured the former police rookie for "playing around" with his service revolver, from which an accidental shot injured Miss Kilmer—almost fatally.

District Commissioners were asked to provide funds for Dorothy's medical care, on the grounds that the District should be liable for negligent acts of its policemen. The request was denied, after Police Supt. Robert J. Barrett advised the Commissioners that the granting of such a request "would set a bad precedent."

Following that decision, District Liners raised the necessary funds to start Dorothy on the road to rehabilitation.

The purses belonged to clerks in a five-and-dime store at 905 8th st. se., Hecht Co., Woodward & Lothrop and Lansburgh's. The purses were stolen here late last year.

The complainant is Mrs. Carol Haines, 26, of 4644 Hillside rd. se., who told Municipal Court she parked her car Sunday night in the 800 block of 13th st. ne., when Westfield leaped through the open door, held his hand in a pocket as if he had a gun and seized her pocketbook. He then ordered her to drive off, but her screams scared him away, she testified.

The burglars made an unsuccessful assault on the company's steel and concrete safe.

Harper Schimpff, one of the owners of the company, said the theft would not result in any curtailment of service.

Second Officer Acquitted at Meade Trial

By The Associated Press

The second of four Army officers charged with neglect of duty and mistreatment of American soldiers in a German disciplinary camp was acquitted yesterday by a Fort Meade (Md.) court-martial.

He is Capt. Samuel H. Wolford of Clear Spring, Md., who was in charge of the stockade and solitary confinement cells at Wurzburg Prison.

Private Joseph Suggs, who said his feet had to be amputated because of his confinement in an unheated cell, testified for the prosecution.

He did the same at the court-martial of Capt. Joel G. Holmes, jr., of Philadelphia, who was acquitted last week.

Wolford testified he thought Suggs froze his feet intentionally so he could go to a hospital. And, he said, he was not at Wurzburg from January 2 to 9, the week Suggs was placed in the solitary block.

Officers still awaiting hearing are Col. Harold McClune, of San Antonio, Tex., commander of the center, and Lieut. Col. George E. Pinard of Wessington Springs, S. Dak., prison officer.

Giving the Fish Eye to a Fish Story . . .

It's so dumb, says Dr. Erdman, that it makes no effort to escape capture and nature has had to provide it with the long bony spines to keep larger fishes from swallowing it whole. $70,000 Profit Made Since '44 By D. C. Links Concessionaire

The Interior Department yesterday handed over figures to the District Recreation Department disclosing the concessionaire who operates the District's public golf courses has made a total profit of approximately $70,000 from 1944 through 1948.

The figure was included in a report on golf courses, operated by the S. G. Loeffler Co. for the Interior Department. The report was submitted to the District Recreation Board at its monthly meeting by Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks, and the Interior Department's representative on the Recreation Board.

Data on operations of the golf courses, and of other District recreation facilities run for the Federal Government by contractors, has been demanded repeatedly by the Recreation Department which wants to control these facilities.

Following receipt of the report, the Recreation Board adopted a resolution asking for a conference between Recreation and Interior Department officials on the operation of the golf courses.

In its resolution, the board asked the Interior Department not to renew the five-year golf contract, which expired December 31, 1948, until after the conference is held. It asked, in addition, that the Interior Department consider extension of the contract for only one year "in the event that it becomes necessary to sign a contract."

The Interior Department's report pointed out that although Loeffler's profits over the five-year period averaged $14,000 yearly, the company suffered a deficit of "approximately $6000" for the year 1948. Rainy weekends, and increased cost of materials and labor were cited as the reasons for the deficit.

Gross receipts for the five-year period totaled $1,577,723, the report stated, and expenses, exclusive of a new development at Fort Dupont Park, totaled $1,747,960.

Under terms of the recently expired contract with Loeffler, the Government and Loeffler split the net profits evenly. Losses are not shared by the Government, however, Park Superintendent Root explained.

The Government has been "plowing back" its 50 per cent share of the profit for "improvement and extension of facilities," Root said.

About 3% "Plowed Back"

In addition, a yearly fund, "not to exceed 5 per cent of the gross receipts" is provided in the contract for rehabilitation of existing facilities. Root told a reporter later that the Government had required only "about 3 per cent" of the gross receipts to be plowed back in 1948.

A total of $183,000 has been spent in improving golfing facilities in the National Capital Parks over the past five years, Root said. This figure includes the Government's contribution through plowed back profits, and about $118,000 advanced by Loeffler for construciton of two miniature golf courses and a clubhouse at the Fort Dupont course, according to Root.

Root said "about half" of the money had been repaid to Loeffler over the past year, but that he was still owed about $70,000 which would be paid "out of profits we hope to make."

Not Ruled Out

Asked if the Cleveland Concession Co., which has asked to operate the courses is ruled out by this indebtedness, Root said "no—they would just have to repay the Loeffler people out of their receipts."

James E. Schwab, vice chairman of the recreation board asked during the meeting why figures on the value of equipment on the golf courses were not included in the Interior Department report.

He was told by Root that only approximate figures were available on the equipment, but that all the Interior Department's figures on the golf courses were available "anytime you want to come down and look them over."

In other actions yesterday, the board adopted a resolution recommending that a drinking fountain at the Bundy School Playground, funds for which are not now available, be installed during the next fiscal year.

It indorsed a bill introduced in the House of Representatives which exempts facilities operated by the Federal Government from the admissions tax on recreation facilities.

The board aslo approved plans for the Fort Chaplin Playground, and for revisions to the Park View Shelter Building.

Alexandria Chest Agency Row Settled

An Alexandria squabble over operating procedure between two clinics in the Alexandria Family Service Society, a Community Chest agency, was settled on a compromise basis last night by the Alexandria City Council.

The council gave the Alcoholic Clinic $2500 to operate with during 1949 and set it up as an independent unit under the City Board of Health.

It appropriated $2600 to the Mental Hygiene Clinic, an amount to be matched by Community Chest and State and Federal funds, but left it under Family Services.

The Alcoholic Clinic started last summer as part of the Mental Hygiene Clinic because only by being a part of the mental clinic could it become eligible for State assistance.

Suporters of the Alcoholic Clinic, however, have sought to separate the two clinics. The Alcoholic Clinic had asked $5000 for operating expenses.

At last night's meeting, the Rev. O. V. T. Chamberlain, a founder of the Alcoholic Clinic, renewed the request for $5000, but said that unless his clinic could be separated from the mental clinic he preferred the city make no appropriation at all.

School Board to Seek Quick Action on Addition

The Alexandria School Board last night agreed to seek quick action on construction of an addition to Mount Vernon School.

The addition is being held up by a dispute over closing one block of Mount Ida ave. It would be on the present site on Mount Ida ave. and would connect two school buildings now standing on either side of the street.

Raugust Quits Primary Race In Alexandria

William F. Raugust, Alexandria attorney and real estate man, last night withdrew from the Democratic primary race for Alexandria city attorney.

Raugust, former executive counsel to the war crimes trials at Nuernburg and president of the Alexandria Community Chest, said last night he filed for the primary on stipulation he would withdraw if a question of his residential qualification could not be settled out of court.

He said he had been unable to obtain an authoritative legal opinion on the matter, which he said involves "the question of only a few days."

At a meeting last night, the Alexandria Democratic Committee approved the petitions filed by the primary aspirants and accepted the resignation of two committee members, Franklin P. Backus, who is a city council candidate, and Charles Sherwood, who wished to devote his time to his insurance business.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Although Man's Mother Has Excellent Social Connections, She Ignores Wife's Hints for Helping Hand; and Latter Calls This Selfish

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Because your daily discussions help many of us not directly involved, I have been hoping that somebody might submit a problem similar to mine, but so far I have seen none like it.

My husband and I have moved recently to a new job in a small city that is new to us; and I have discovered that my husband's mother (who lives elsewhere) knows all the right people here, so she could help us a lot—if she would.

She visits here sometimes, as she did during December, a man and his wife who are financially and socially powerful. When her visit was over she stopped in briefly to see us, on her way to the train. When I said I should like to meet the Alexanders (I shall call them), she shrugged it off. She said they are old and sick nowadays and don't entertain as they used to; but I have only to read the social items to know better.

Wife Frankly Covets Chic Social Rating

ALSO SHE HAS a small annuity and if she would come to live with us, the combined incomes would enable us to have a better home in a better section. I don't covet her money, but if she would pay us even half what it must cost her to keep up a separate establishment, it would make such a difference.

She should like it here, for she has a number of connections and I honestly do covet her social life. John and I both need it, and since she could help us so much and so easily, without putting herself out, it seems selfish that she doesn't. Maybe she doesn't realize this, but I can't tell her and my husband won't.

As a girl she had money and advantages and it still shows. John thinks she is bright and cute, and when I try to explain to him what I think she might do for us, he just says, "Oh, you don't know Ma," which is no answer at all. It seems to me she owes it to her son to help put us over. What do you think? G. C.

In Nature of Snob to Snub a Climber

DEAR G. C.: Entree to homes of distinction, an honor you crave, ordinarily is gained on merit of one kind or another, not by pushing, which advertises the vulgarian. And it's second nature with snobs to snub a climber, of whom they say to themselves unconsciously, "There but for the grace of God go I."

Your mother-in-law is a snob, it seems, despite facets of refinement acquired in the rearing process; and I gather she breathes satisfaction in keeping or "putting" you in your place—if I may speak in snob parlance.

Incidentally, a snob has two faces. He repels the advances of those whom he regards as his inferiors,—a definition that fits Ma's treatment of you. Also, the snob fawningly admires, or vulgarly seeks association with, those whom he regards as his superiors—a picture of you: eager to crash Ma's circle of friends in town, only because they're top dog.

Ma's Turned Thumbs Down on Son's Wife

AS I GET the picture, Ma dislikes you and dryly makes no secret of it behind your back. Maybe you haven't caught on, but Ma, in an urbane way, signaled the local elite to ignore you—as a person of no concern to her—when she stayed with the Alexanders while avoiding your home until her last hour in the city.

Perhaps she came to town with that hatchet purpose in mind, possibly activated by a canny theory that you married John for scheming reasons and not for love. Indeed her ultimate aim may be to frustrate your ambitions while adroitly exposing you to John as a barefaced social climber, and work from there to extricate him from a marriage she deplores.

In any event, whatever her motives, she is being mean—deliberately, I think. And this fact alone ought to dissuade you from trying to "use" her for personal advantage. In view of her attitude, it is wacky to campaign for a shared life with her, to give yourself chic as hostess and guest. And in my opinion it is not incumbent upon her to carry you up the social ladder. If she wants to, fine; if she doesn't, she is entitled to keep her distance. All in all, your high-pressure notions of what she owes you, via John, reflect very unfavorably on your taste, intelligence and social savvy.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail nor personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Beauty Memo . .

THE strapless bodice vogue got off to a fast start this year in the resort clothes collections, and it promises to be a sure-fire winner by next summer.

Most women will probably own at least one outfit of this type, either a sun dress or a formal evening gown. And that, of course, poses the glamour problem of bare shoulders. All women do not have pretty arms, shoulders and necks. If they are going to exhibit them, it will be necessary to examine them for repairs.

Flabby arms will respond to exercises or electric massage. If the skin is discolored a good bleach cream can help correct the condition. Sometimes lemon juice will do the job. And don't forget to work on the elbows, for the skin there is likely to be quite discolored.

Body cream or hand lotion should be applied frequently during your reconditioning course. Smooth it on before a bath and let the steamy water help the cream to sink deep into your skin. If you don't have a nicely scented lotion, cream or oil, use your pantry beauty aid—olive oil. Rub it gently into the skin of your face, neck, shoulders and back—never neglect the nape of the neck.

Another effective home beauty treatment may be had by mixing salt with a little water and rubbing it over arms, neck and shoulders. Shower it off and apply cream. It leaves the skin pink and glowing.

Superfluous hair on the arms should be removed if possible. Otherwise it should be bleached. Since the fuzz on arms is lighter, usually, than that on legs, a wax treatment may keep it off for months. Cream depilatories do the job as well, but must be used more frequently.

Very hot soapy water means easy dishwashing.

A little borax added to the starch will mean smoother ironing.

The meat grinder need not be confined to meat. It makes splendid breadcrumbs. Dry stale bread in the oven and then put it through the grinder.

Melt the fat for muffins or baked puddings in the baking pan to save time and extra dishwashing. Start melting the fat before measuring other ingredients so that it will be ready and the pan cool enough when the batter is ready.

'But There Are Other Ways'

Odds Against Filibuster Bill This Session, Humphrey Says

By Genevieve Reynolds

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) yesterday expressed doubt that Congress would enact legislation to halt filibusters by a majority vote. "Odds are against passage of a measure to invoke cloture by a majority vote," he told some 600 delegates attending the closing session of the second National Conference on Unfinished Business in Social Legislation held in the Interdepartmental Auditorium.

"But," he reassured the group, "there are ways to end filibusters. There are plenty of us young men in Congress who can talk and stay up all night, according to our wives and mothers."

The young Senator who led the fight for a strong Civil Rights plank in the Democratic Party's national platform at the Philadelphia convention last summer, issued a sharp retort to critics who charged that the Administration would soft-pedal civil rights legislation. He said that the rumors of the "forgetful and the vengeful are not without political motive."

Senator Humphrey asserted "the fight for civil rights has only begun; and we who pledged our services to the elimination of our country's greatest shame will continue to lash at discrimination, at lynching, at poll taxes, against bigotry until these blights are felled by law."

'No Priorities on Essentials'

Asserting that "we can't talk about critically essential legislation in terms of priorities," he declared that the President's entire program must be enacted into law, adding. "We will not be diverted from that job by chicanery or anything else."

Humphrey said that he would sponsor a Senate bill providing for a permanent Civil Rights Commission in the Federal Government to vitalize Civil Rights law enforcement and educational processes.

According to the Minnesota Senator such a commission would serve as a civil rights fact-finding agency; act to prevent conflicts that threaten basic democracy; recommend improvements in civil rights practices and draw attention to emerging problems on the national and international level; act in a consultative capacity, offering assistance to Sate, local and private agencies concerned with civil rights.

"With a body of law asserting and protecting the civil rights of all our citizens, and a Civil Rights Commission, serving as a barometer of our progress," he maintained, "we will have forged two of the most important implements for the work of making our country a citadel of freedom—not only for the racial and religious minorities but for every citizen in the land.

Advocating the President's programs of Federal aid to education and national health insurance, Senator Humphrey cautioned: "Wise and adequate legislation cannot be enacted in one month. The President's program is comprehensive. Its many facets must be dealt with separately. It will take time, hard work, devotion to our political principles and platform."

'A Constructive Congress'

He told the audience that in his opinion the Eighty-first Congress will be a constructive one. "It is neither radical or reactionary," he averred. "It's a moderate, liberal Congress."

Representative Andrew J. Biemiller in an afternoon address charged that the American Medical Association is obstructing the Administration's national health program and challenged the association's Journal editor, Morris Fishbein "to lift the iron curtain of censorship from the AMA Journal to permit a fair presentation of both sides on the national health insurance issue.

The Wisconsin Representative asked Dr. Fishbein to open the pages of the AMA Journal, "so that the American doctor may find full and fair discussion of the pros and cons of this significant issue."

Biemiller, an all out advocate of the Administration's health program, told the visiting delegates that the American Medical Association "ought to denounce the National Physicians Committee for the Extension of Medical Care."

He said that he had received a letter from the Committee giving ut false propaganda on the national health insurance program.

"If we don't get national health insurance soon, people who realize they can get better medical care will demand socialized medicine," emphasized the speaker, and "national health insurance is not socialized medicine."

Representative Biemiller said that he would put in the hopper a new bill to extend the Burton Hill construction bill to facilitate building of new hospitals.

A Settled Cecil Beaton, Bustling Maggie Chase Rediscover Washington

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

LATELY, with cries of pleased surprise, Vogue has rediscovered Washington, reporting with costly photographs the daily, too often monotonous, round, making it glamorous as all getout. From 3 o'clock Friday until 11 o'clock Sunday, Cecil Beaton, in tow of Vogue Society Editress Maggie Case, snapped such niblets of Washingtonia as the interior of Mrs. Rowan Shevlin's newly redecorated house, luncheon at the National Gallery of Art with the Johnny Walkers and, after dinner, a gathering at the Stewart Alsops in honor of Randolph Churchill and his more or less recent bride. The photographs should be wonderful, for today's Cecil Beaton is sensible, hard-working, his extraordinary talent matured and a far cry from the fluttery youth who flattered Gotham dowagers by "shooting" them through a pink-tulle-veiled Brownie lens; who sewed thousands of buttons to his parlor curtains; wore rose-strewn dressing gowns and, to cadge publicity, lugged a 6-foot, carefully wrapped ficus tree on innumerable transatlantic crossings. The Churchills, who've been holing-in at Kay Halle's, are Southland bound for 14 lecture engagements, traveling in Johnny Schiff's car which will be delivered in Palm Beach. Second marriage has changed Master Churchill little, his talk bubbles continuously and with infinite, if sometimes numbing, variety.

Notes on Some Gay Birds

SOME months ago this department noted cross-ocean communications between a UNESCO official and UNESCO Head Julian Huxley. The official deplored Huxley's lack of time for pursuing his favored avocation, ornithology, Huxley's return informed he was still absorbed in bird study and, as a matter of fact, had discovered several new varieties, most important of which was the Extra Marital Lark. This enchanting pastime all too quickly reached the Nation's Capital, and right now there's a tight little organization called the Washington Indoor Bird Watching Club. Among leading lights, needless to say, are several respected members of the Central Intelligence Agency and of our very own State Department. Discoveries are being made practically every night and we append a partial list of rara aves jotted down during the past busy winter months: A Ruffled Spouse, Rosy Breasted Pushover, Back-to-Back Tern, Burping Swallow, Purple-Faced Tongueslip, Spraymouth Filibuster, White-crested Pompous, Double Billed Check Fumbler, Baltimore Boriole, and a variety found in specialty large numbers on the Hill—the Bald Ego.

A Portrait Painter Progresses

VIENNESE-BORN Greta Kempton, whose 16-portrait exhibition opened Saturday at the Corcoran Gallery, has painted Mrs. Truman, Margaret, the President twice. The second portrait has just been completed, the first now hangs in St. Louis' Masonic Temple. She's executed three of Secretary Snyder, one for his home, office and the Capitol in Little Rock, Ark. Lately the artist has polished off Secretaries Krug and Donaldson. Like most careers, one thing lead to another and since Miss Kempton painted her governess' portrait she's scarcely been separated from brush and canvas. When she's done, temporarily, with Washington, she'll be off to new commissions in New Orleans and Mississippi. Miss Kempton, in private life Mrs. McNamara, has solved one of the most tedious aspects of being a successful artist—she's learned to paint sitting down!

Bold, Artistic Strokes Put Frances O'Brien On Top of Her World

By Marie McNair

FRANCES O'BRIEN, who took her first lessons in art at the Corcoran Gallery, spreads her brush over wide areas. Her wood engravings have been seen on the Saturday Review of Literature covers, and the Chemical and Engineering News. She was at one time art director at the Ethel Walker School in Simsburg, Conn., and the Ethical Culture School in New York. Her work hangs in major galleries throughout the United States.

Just now she's in Birmingham, Ala., with a commission to do an 88-foot mural, 13 feet high, the largest painting ever attempted in this country by a woman.

In Birmingham, where she's already at work, the artist is staying with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. W. Oliver Cox, whom she used often to visit when they lived in nearby Alexandria.

Vestavia, where Mrs. O'Brien will work, is the home of the late George Ward, built by him on Shades Mountain, and is a replica of the Temple of Vestavia in Italy. The top of the house has been set aside as a templar room—a round room 28 feet in diameter.

The artist will adorn the wall with a series of paintings interpreting the legend of Vesta and her priestesses, with some of Birmingham's pretty young debutantes and matrons to be asked to pose.

Immediately after the unveiling on April 1, Mrs. O'Brien will fly back to New York where assignments for several portraits await her. She has done a portrait a week for the last year, painting such notables as Eric Maria Remarque, Franz Werfel, Vincent Sheehan and Irving Berlin.

So Little Time for So Many Farewells

PARTIES continue to pile up for the popular Belts—the Cuban Ambassador and his pretty senora who are to return soon to Havana.

This evening Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon will entertain at a farewell dinner in their honor; on Thursday is Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle's luncheon for them and the Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Dillon's dinner.

Mrs. A. S. Monroney has a luncheon planned for Friday for Senora de Belt and that evening is Senator and Mrs. J. William Fulbright's dinner.

Saturday the Portuguese Ambassador will give a luncheon, to be followed by cocktails by Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins.

The Ambassador and Senora de Belt will dine that evening with Mrs. Albert Fowler and go with her to the Dancing Class. Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper will entertain for them at cocktails on Sunday, and Representative Frances Bolton will give a dinner that night.

"The years we have spent have been simply perfect," sighs "Cuca" de Belt at the thought of leaving.

TOWN TOPICS:

LOOKS AS IF James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State, will spend less and less time in the Capital now. He's given up the apartment at the Shoreham, where he and Mrs. Byrnes lived all during his terms in various public offices, and he and Mrs. Byrnes have left for Spartanburg, S. C., where they have a home.

Mrs. Carolyn Hagner Shaw's "Social List of Washington" has produced an offspring—a 30-page supplement listing the new members of Congress and their addresses, and last-minute changes in the executive departments. The cover is a replica of the big book's and the special editions are now in the mails to subscribers.

Last Day of the Diet

Keep Counting Calories And Eat to Stay Slim

By Ida Jean Kain

Would you like the technique for carrying on scientific weight control without actually dieting at all? There is a method of meal planning and ordering that automatically keeps the calories within reason. We follow it at our house with happy results.

In most families some restrictions are necessary, for overeating and overweight the biggest nutritional problems are in our country today.

In planning a reducing menu, include only one starch with each meal and cut fats to the bone. When potatoes are in the menu, bread should be left out and desserts should be fruit. In planning a keeping-slim menu, two starchy foods may be included with a meal and fats used sparingly. If bread and potatoes are used, the dessert should not be made with flour—such as pie, cake or dumplings.

Boiled down, it's the carbohydrates (sugars and starches) and the fat trimmings that make the difference between a fattening and a slimming menu.

When weight has to be watched carefully, fats have to be watched, for they contain 2¼ times as many calories as the other nutrients. All fat should be trimmed from meat, and gravy should be routinely avoided. The amount of French dressing and mayonnaise should be limited, and cream should not be added to fruits. All this is largely habit.

To keep on the safe and svelte side, plan the menus around the protective foods—lean meat or fish; eggs, cheese, milk; vegetables and fruits and a limited amount of wholegrain bread and butter. Then if more bread and butter and a dessert can be included without causing weight to go up, fine . . . add them.

But if the extras cause the pounds to pile on . . . leave them strictly alone! Excess fat is "dead weight" which you have to tote. Overeating isn't worth it!

YOUR frame of mind makes all the difference. If you feel disgruntled at any calorie restriction, then you'll be struggling for the rest of your life against fat. But if you take the attitude that this pattern of eating to keep slim is truly an amazing science, and are delighted with the results, then keeping slim will be a pleasure.

This is the last day of the special series. If normal weight has not been reached, continue to restrict calories to around 1100 a day, all in the protective foods. Eat that way until all excess pounds have been turned back into energy.

Those who have reached normal weight should continue to build the three meals around the protective foods, with slightly larger servings and more bread and butter. It's a good plan to set a 2 to 3-pound limit on weight gains. When the indicator goes over the 2-pound mark, clamp down on calories, start trimming.

Simplicity Is the Keynote in Fashions for Spring

A one-piece frock, it features a front bolero effect, edged with grosgrain. Matching grosgrain sash molds the waist and is clasped with small rhinestone buttons.

Soft skirt fullness, natural shoulder lines and short cuffed sleeves make it new and interesting. Modeled yesterday at the showing of Joseph Halpert's spring collection by Woodward & Lothrop.

Ask Anne

My wife was listening to the radio not long ago and she heard a radio announcer mention a "fix-it shop" or "make-it-yourself shop" I was wondering if you or one of your readers could give me the address of this shop or one similar to it? It is a shop where a person can go and make things out of wood. The instructor used to be an industrial arts teacher and his shop is somewhere south of Alexandria. A shop in Washington would be fine though, if you know of one.
W. W. H.

The shop is located over a store at 1721 Braddock Road, about a block from the Fairlington Shopping Center. The hours are Monday through Friday, 6:30 to 10:30 p. m. and Saturdays from 1 to 5. The proprietor is at present an industrial arts instructor and is available at all times to give instruction and assistance. The fee is on the hourly basis for the actual time spent in the shop. Unfinished work may be left at the shop between working sessions. For further information, call the shop at Temple 9847 during the hours stated.

Can you tell me where I can buy the new germicidal lamps and about how much they would cost?
H. R. Q.

One firm which sells these lamps can be reached by calling Taylor 6661. A 15-watt lamp sufficient to provide disinfection for an area 120 square feet in size can be purchased for approximately $25 complete. A renewal unit for this size installation is $4.50. A 20-watt lamp sufficient for an area of 250 square feet costs about $33, with the renewal unit costing $6.50. The installation is a wall type lamp with a cord which plugs into a wall socket. For further information, I suggest you call the firm representative at the above number.

Several weeks ago Life Magazine published an article on a permanent type of starch, a new starch superior to any previously used. Is it possible to obtain this starch here, and if so, where?
I. E. H.

This product has been put upon the market so recently that the distribution center for it in this area will not be completely set up until March. The local representative for the firm which makes it says, also, that the plans have not been completed for the retail outlet, but that possibly the housewares departments of the large Washington department stores will have it when it appears here.

Would you let me know what I can do to remove paint spots from a raincoat made of plastic? There is quite a bit on the coat as I walked under a scaffold where a painter was spraying the ceiling.
S. M. B.

Because it is possible that any of the common solvents which would remove the paint will be injurious to the plastic, I suggest you write to the manufacturer of the raw material in the coat for specific information on removing the paint. This firm is the Bakelite Corporation, 30 East 42nd st., New York, 17, N. Y.

Could you give me a recipe for Banana Cream Pie, not the kind that you use sliced bananas and poured custard over them?
C. J. L.

I'm not sure that I am interpreting your question correctly. However, here is a recipe for Banana Cream Pie which uses a type of cream pudding with the bananas rather than a true custard.

Banana Cream Pie

1 cup milk
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
¼ cup coffee cream
¾ tablespoon lemon juice
2 large bananas

BRING MILK to scalding temperature in the top of a double boiler. Mix together sugar, flour, salt and add just enough cold milk to make a paste. Add to the milk in the double boiler. Stir until thick and let cook 15 minutes. Add slightly beaten egg yolks and when well stirred in, allow the mixture to cool. Stir in thin cream, lemon juice and sliced banana. Turn into a cooked pie shell and top with meringue made by beating the egg whites until stiff and then adding 2 tablespoons of powdered sugar and ¼ teaspoon lemon extract. Brown meringue in 325 degree f. oven for 15 to 20 minutes.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Babies can be fun—and they should be. Far too often young parents take their job so seriously that they have little of the fun that it can be to live with a baby.

On the other hand, it is possible to carry the idea of baby as a plaything to the point where it is definitely harmful to him. If, for instance, he's picked up and shown off at the least provocation, no matter even if he's in the middle of his nap, he is likely to become fussy and irritable. As he grows a bit older and begins to have interests of his own, to be snatched from playing with toys, so that some member of the family can enjoy him, is likewise disturbing.

When there are older sisters or brothers in the family, they may need a little guidance along these lines, for they are not likely to understand that the baby needs time to himself.

Here again, as in so many things, it's a matter of the golden mean. We know that babies thrive on attention and affection—that they should not be left alone in their beds or even their playpens throughout the day.

On the other hand, too much stimulus from other people will breed not only irritation but may also condition them so that they are never happy alone.

A mere 100 years ago, driven by the terrible thirst that only hard work in mining gold could bring, bearded, dust-stained gents were rushing into California saloons to utter a croaking cry: "Whisky!" Likely you've seen this tableau in the movies.

Miss Andrews

Without wishing to testify to the old saw that there's nothing new under the sun, what's been happening to Josh Levin, keeper of the new Salle de Champagne (Cairo Hotel), is pretty much the same.

The main differences are that this is now and Levin has had to turn the parched supplicants away because the policy has been to serve, along with the cuisine, nothing more than wine and brandies.

This is to announce, without further ado, that the upholstered room now is equipped to make appropriate answer to all modern-day croaking cries. If, says Levin, whisky is your pleasure, so shall it be. The fact that Washington is the whisky-drinkingest town in the country (as dry-as-dust surveys attest) has come to the Salle's attention.

Helping bring the room to the attention of newcomers, it might be added, is curvaceous Alberta Andrews, 22, the near-silver tressed girl who greets patrons and leads them to seats when Ernest, the major-domo, is busy elsewhere.

A good possibility exists, to quote a lad who ought to know, that the Vagabond Lover soon may be headlining the entertainment at the Shoreham Hotel's Blue Room.

"They're still dickering," says the informant, "for Rudy Vallee. If the deal goes through, he'll probably be at the Blue Room sometime next month—maybe sooner." 'Tis a possibility to be considered, indeed.

Meanwhile—this week, at any rate—the room offers the Arnaut Brothers in, among other things, a series of bird imitations, and the Three Wiles, two men and a girl in a novelty act. Added to the second show is the pleasing contralto (or soprano, as needs be), of Kay DeWitt.

Still a torment, incidentally, to Barnee, the Blue Room's long time podium master, is the memory of the President's inaugural gala. Those name bands didn't do right by Mr. Truman, he says.

When the President entered, Barnee indignantly asserts, they should have gone into a swing, or Latin-American, version of the Missouri Waltz. "It was Harry Truman's show, not theirs," he somewhat redundantly points out.

The hotel's Palladian Room (not more than 100 yards from the Blue Room) is jumping these days to the music of Sande William's band—including Saturday afternoons, when Sande plays for tea dancing from 4:30 to 7 p.m.

MEMORABILIA . . . Already well under way at the Mayflower Lounge (Mayflower Hotel) is baritone Eric Thorson, erstwhile member of the St. Paul Civic Opera and the U. S. Army as a wartime combat engineer. Thorson, blond native of Minneapolis, opened at the Mayflower Monday . . . Twenty-two-year-old Gene Williams, former vocalist with Johnny Long, Vincent Lopez, Claude Thornhill and others, heads up his own band at the Kavakos Club these nights—a band, he says, formed especially for television . . . Fran Warren, one of RCA's recording artists, lent her voice to a special show at the Kavakos Monday night and since has been making personal appearances on television and radio programs.

Council Keeps Montgomery Safety Board

Continuation of the Montgomery County Safety Board, a quasi-official body that studies traffic safety for the county, was voted yesterday by the Montgomery County Council, meeting in Rockville.

The council named 28 persons to the board, most of whom served on the board under the former county board of commissioners.

The council then referred several matters to the board for study and recommendation, including a request by the Leland-Bradley Citizens Association that speed limit signs be placed on both sides of Fairfax rd, between Hampden and Wessling lanes and that police patrol the area to reduce speeding.

The council delayed action on a request by County Public Utilities Agent Albert E. Conradis that he be permitted to attend a hearing on proposed rates of Montgomery County taxicabs to be held Monday in Baltimore by the State Public Service Commission.

Fixing of rates for the county by the PSC was requested by the old board of county commissioners after a court opinion had found a county ordinance in conflict with a State motor vehicle law. A bill in the present session of the State Legislature, if enacted, would validate county regulation of taxicabs despite the State law.

The council adopted a resolution setting forth qualifications for selection of a county manager and set March 15 as deadline for receipt of applications. The top limit on salary was set at $12,000.

No definite age limit was set, but the council said the appointee should be young enough to give 15 or 20 years' service before retirement. The qualifications will be advertised in publications of the International Association of City Managers.

Appointed to the Safety Board were:

County Farm Agent O. W. Anderson of Gaithersburg; Dr. Meredith F. Burrill, director of U. S. Board on Geographical Names, 3503 Grove st., Chevy Chase; Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the D. C. Division, American Automobile Association, of Glen; Capt. Charles D. Curtiss, deputy commissioner, United States Public Roads Administration, 10 W. Virginia st., Chevy Chase; M. CIO President Has Emergency Appendectomy

Pittsburgh, Feb. 8 (AP).—Philip Murray, president of the CIO and the United Steelworkers of America, underwent an emergency appendectomy at Mercy Hospital last midnight. His condition was reported satisfactory today.

The labor leader will be 63 in May. He entered the hospital two weeks ago for a rest and a physical checkup after suffering a stomach disorder.

Today more than 900,000 members of the Steelworkers Union Murray helped to organize more than a decade ago were voting in the United States and Canada for his reelection as their president. Murray was unopposed.

Pet Peeve

Stray Animal Headache to Falls Church

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

Falls Church police think they have enough to do without bothering about dogs, ducks, chickens and rabbits.

The other day, the cops pinched a vagrant pooch and one stray chicken, both for wandering aimlessly about city streets.

There is no animal pound in Falls Church. So police jailed the pair overnight—the dog in one cell of the Falls Church jail, the chicken in the other.

When owners failed to claim the animals, one policeman took the dog home and made a pet of her. Another cop got the chicken and fried it.

Kill Ducks and Rabbits

Meanwhile, a band of dogs, led by (of all things) a police dog, caused more police worry.

The band of dogs vaulted over the fence of one Falls Church resident and slaughtered (a) two of her rabbits, and (b) four of her ducks.

Irate owner of the rabbits and ducks, Mrs. Thomas J. Hayes, 704 Villa Ridge rd., promptly put the bite on Falls Church to recover the value of the pets.

Under Virginia law, owners of stock and pets killed by dogs can claim payment from the local dog tax fund.

First Such Claim

City Attorney LaRue Van Meter admitted this was the first such claim ever filed against Falls Church, which became a second class city only last August.

He asked Mrs. Hayes to itemize her loss and submit it to the city council.

The local tax fund, now in infancy, should reach "several hundred dollars" by the end of the year, Van Meter said.

Police are still hunting the renegade police dog.

Chavez Urges Hemispheric Highway Net

Good highways promote good will and should be spread to all corners of the Western Hemisphere, Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.), chairman of the Senate Public Works Committee, said last night.

He addressed the Road Builders Conference and the forty-sixth annual meeting of the American Road Builders Association at the Statler Hotel.

The Senator urged that a network of roads be developed throughout the hemisphere "to constitute a sinew of steel linking our countries in indissoluble union."

In addition to their goodwill value, such highways would be valuable for their tourist and security importance, he said.

Whittington Also Speaks

The chairman of the House Public Works Committee, Representative Will M. Whittington (D., Miss.), also addressed the evening banquet attended by more than 1000 road builders, engineers and officials.

He said the next step in Federal Aid Highway legislation might be "to provide for a system of two lane highways and for Federal participation to a much larger percentage of the cost of two lane highways than for ordinary single lanes.

A second new step would benefit the people of rural areas, who are road conscious, Whittington said. "The argument that Federal aid was necessary in 1921 to get the farmers out of the mud" is more true today, he said.

Farm-to-Market Roads

"Therefore, I predict the second step will be the extension of the Federal Aid Highway program to provide for more rural and farm-to-market roads," he stated.

A feature of the evening was a salute by a Marine honor guard to the Associaiton's Pan-American Division, headed by Rene S. Pulido y Morales of Cuba.

Of the 22 Latin-American engineers brought to this country for training during the last few years, it was noted, three have become ministers of public works, seven have become directors of highways and three more have become directors in private engineering organizations.

"That was the Good Neighbor Policy in high gear," Senator Chavez said.

News Photo Exhibit Opens

An exhibit of about 300 photographs covering news highlights of the past 100 years will be opened today in New York City's Museum of Modern Art, 11 W. 53d st.

Prepared by Capt. Edward Steichen, wartime chief of Navy photography and now director of the museum's department of photography, the exhibition includes the eight-page Inaugural Day picture section of The Washington Post of January 21, and the January 20 advertisement of the Hecht Co. in The Washington Post with a half-page, side-view photograph of President Truman at his desk.

The exhibit, which will be open until May 1, also includes daguerreotypes of the gold rush in California, original prints made by Matthew B. Brady during the Civil War, and a group of old stereoscopes, one showing Blondin walking a tight rope stretched across the Niagara Falls in 1859.

What's the Verdict

THE DOMESTIC SCENE

Q. A man sued for divorce, charging desertion. Because he did not know the whereabouts of his wife, he caused notice of the suit to be published in paid legal notices. His wife made no answer. Is he entitled to a divorce decree by default?

A. It is common practice to demand some evidence of the truth of the charges made in the complaint, even though there has been no answer. In the District of Columbia, for example, there is a statutory requirement that in an uncontested divorce case a disinterested attorney be appointed by the court to defend against the suit. A statute also provides that there shall be no default divorce decree given without proof. Most lawsuits are actively contested, so that the truth is brought out. Most divorce actions are uncontested, so truth often is concealed.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Maybe It's a Prediction Of Things to Come

Mrs. G. Poletis of Alexandria, Va., tells me that she spent a good bit of time coaching her 3-year-old son, George, to answer the phone properly.

Georgie was told that the proper way to do it was to pick up the receiver and say: "Hello. Poletis residence."

At long last, it appeared that Georgie had his line down pat, and he was given his first opportunity to strut his stuff. Picking up the receiver, he shrilled: "Hello. Poletis President."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Since you're one of the few people who have the courage to speak up about our inefficient transportation system, I'd like to tell you about the situation at Georgia and Alaska aves.

During the evening rush hour, we must wait at least 20 minutes for a car to show up, and then 50 or 75 people try to squeeze into one vehicle.

Many times, we're forced to give up, and take a cab. Yet the place is simply lousy with buses for the people going down 16th st.

Mary Gilbert
6119 7th pl. nw.

Dear Mary:

I took your plea to a Capital Transit spokesman, who was unimpressed. He says facilities at Georgia and Alaska are sufficient to handle all the present passengers at this point, and then some.

"Of course, during rush hours," he says, "the facilities will not be as comfortable as at other times."

On that statement, at least, we're all agreed.

Bill.

STREET SCENE

Our reporter for this one is Mrs. A. Fisher of 212 T st. ne.:

It was on 10th st. nw., between F and G. The little boy was about 8 years old, his sister perhaps 6. They were selling artificial flowers.

I didn't want any of their flowers, but I couldn't resist the earnest appeal in their smudged faces.

So I gave them a few coins, and saw those sober little faces light up in appreciation.

They went their way, and I went mine. But two dozen paces further down the street I paused and looked back at them.

They had stopped before a blind man who was selling papers there, and were putting the coins in his cup.

O'DELL RINGS THE BELL

From W. L. Stewart of Fort Worth, Tex., comes another story about Washington cab drivers.

Mr. Stewart was in Washington recently, and rode in Bell Cab No. 201. When he reached into his pocket to pay his fare, six $20 bills fell, unnoticed, to the floor of the cab.

The next day, the hacker found the money and remembered that his last passenger on the previous day had been the man who was stopping at the Shoreham.

So he took up his vigil at the Shoreham, and waited. When Stewart came along, he asked: "Did you lose any money in my cab yesterday?"

The surprised Stewart took a quick inventory of his cash and muttered that by gosh he must have—six twenties, in fact.

So Bell Cab Driver No. 201 forked over the dough, and Stewart says the Bell people are to be congratulated for having such an honest fellow in their employ.

Bell's No. 201 is Harry B. O'Dell of 1120 N. Danville st., Arlington, Va. And Stewart's congratulations are hereby extended to Bell's O'Dell.

Dear Diary:- Tonight, I met my man!! He is married and has a family - but my conscience is clear-all's fair in love and war. Tonight, he offered to take me home. When we were alone he held me in his arms -
I mean he saved me from falling on the ice. I think he is beginning to become aware of me--
HEY, WINNIE, THAT BABY SITTER FINISHED OFF ALL THE CHICKEN!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Thurmond Snubbed by Barkley

By Drew Pearson

Dixiecrat Governor J. Strom Thurmond, who was cold-shouldered by President Truman at the inauguration, has now been snubbed again—this time by Vice President Barkley. . . Invited to address a meeting of South Carolina mayors this week, Barkley was all set to accept. But at the last minute Thurmond, a Governor, decided to attend the mayors' meeting and also asked Barkley to be his guest at the Governor's mansion. . . . This put the VP on the spot. So the other day on the Senate floor, Barkley beckon the two South Carolina Senators, Burnet Maybank and Olin Johnston, up to the Vice President's rostrum, explained confidentially that he wouldn't stay with Thurmond but didn't want to create an incident. The best solution, Barkley decided, was not to go to Columbia at all.

Coal Strike Worry

Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin is worried about a long and possibly bloody coal strike this summer. John L. Lewis' contract with the coal operators expires in May. . . . However, because of mild winter weather in the East, coal stocks are higher than in years, and the operators know that if there is no strike the price of coal will go down. Therefore, to keep the price of coal up a long strike will be necessary. Also, the Labor Department suspects that some of the bigger coal operators want a long strike in order to squeeze out marginal independents. . . . Secretary Tobin is hoping both sides will put patriotism above profits but he has his fingers crossed.

Reds' Black Market

General MacArthur has told Secretary of the Army Royall that he has ironclad proof the Communists in Japan are financing their activities through black-market operations. MacArthur says he has evidence the Communists are smuggling a Russian-made medicine for curing stomach diseases into Japan and selling it illegally at fantastic profits . . . Also, they're selling newsprint which the U. S. Army allocated the the Japanese Communist newspaper "Red Flag." MacArthur reported that several top-ranking Japanese Communists are involved . . . Royall has told MacArthur to crack down on the Communists whenever he believes best.

Air Force Balks

Although the Navy was sharply criticized for revealing its proposed strength down to the last plane and ship, Secretary of Defense Forrestal's office has been pressuring the Air Force also to publish its secret strength. This was bluntly suggested to the Air Force by Forrestal's budget chief, W. J. McNeill—who happens to be a reserve admiral. The Air Force turned him down, however, on the grounds of danger to national security.

Congress Gets Preview

Secretary of State Acheson is taking no chances with Congress. As Undersecretary he had his fingers burned a couple of times because he didn't tip off Congress in advance about the Administration's most important bills. But it's different now.

That's why Acheson and his new assistant Secretary of State, Dean Rusk, conferred secretly twice this week with key members of the Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs Committees.

At one hush-hush meeting, Acheson gave Vandenberg a complete fill-in on the negotiations for a North Atlantic alliance and urged him to get behind the treaty when it comes up in the Senate. Vandenberg replied he would have to study it carefully first before making any commitments.

Acheson also pleaded with Vandenberg to support the Administration's bill to appropriate 16 million dollars to relieve the plight of 750,000 Arab refugees from the Palestine fighting.

Meanwhile, Assistant Secretary Rusk had gone up to Capitol Hill to talk secretly with Congressman Sol Bloom, Democratic chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, about the same thing. The State Department had been especially worried about Bloom's reaction to the bill to aid the Arabs, because he had indicated in a speech he might oppose the idea. However, Rusk found Bloom quite reasonable on all points, and now feels he will vote for the bill.

Come the Revolution!

It's Here—now—today!

For you—the American citizen—are the greatest revolutionist in history!

You have met those age-old tyrants—cold, hunger, dirt, disease—and hurled them back.
True, they have not surrendered. We still have poverty. We still have sharp ups and downs of prices and jobs. The revolution still goes on.

But it has gone farther here. We have won for ourselves more comfort, more convenience, more security and independence, than any other people since the world began.

As yet, this revolution—the Industrial Revolution—has hardly begun in other great areas.
For two-thirds of the human race, the amount of food, clothing and shelter they are able to get with their best labors is never more than just enough to live on.

In the modern world that can't last.

And they are taking a long look at us.

At the promise of individual reward that has stimulated American invention and business enterprise.

At American technical progress, which has made mechanical energy perform miracles of mass production, reflected in constantly lower costs—and in the long run, lower prices.

If we continue to make that system work—if we constantly turn out more for every hour we put in—if we keep on creating more wealth for all of us and more jobs for more people—then other nations will follow us.

If we don't, they they'll probably go communist or fascist.

That's the challenge—and it's the most important in all history. Let's go out and meet it.
Let's make our free, dynamic American system run so well at home that others will want to follow our example.
If we do that, we will give new hope to millions everywhere.
